Preface

Dear Students,

A most hearty welcome to Std IX. We are happy to place this textbook 'English Kumarbharati' in your hands.

English has been a part of your studies since Std I. So far, you have learnt to use English for communication in most situations. You have enjoyed some interesting stories and passages in the previous textbooks. You have completed many projects. You have read the works of many well-known authors. Now that you are in Std IX, you will do all this and also learn to use English with a better understanding of the language and the way it is used.

English is not just a subject in your curriculum. It is the medium through which you learn all other subjects. A good command over the language will make it easier for you to study other subjects, too. Our main aim is to help you use English with confidence. We want you to be able to ask questions, gain knowledge and new skills, be creative and to spend your free time joyfully. That is why, we want you to take part in all the activities and exercises in the 'Warming up' and 'English Workshop' sections with enthusiasm. Talk to your teacher freely about the problems and difficulties you face while studying this textbook. Many of the activities are designed to show you ways of thinking and learning on your own. The more you use them, the better you will learn.

We will be happy if you share your feelings about the contents of this book with us. We hope you enjoy studying it throughout the year.

Wish you all the best in your studies !

Let's Begin!

Know your Teacher

Interview your teacher.

Use the following points –

- His/Her name
- The qualities he/she likes best in his/her students
- His/Her favourite English author/book/film, etc.
- His/Her favourite teacher in school or college, and the reasons why he/she liked that teacher.
- What your teacher would like you to focus on in Std IX.

The Bigger-the Better

Form groups of 10 students each, seated in a circle. Keep your paper and pen ready.

At the start, the group leader begins by writing any 1 letter of the alphabet and passes the paper to the next student. The second one should add a second letter, but make sure it does not spell a complete word (an, be, is, etc) and pass it to the next. Each student should think and add a letter to help form a bigger and bigger word. The spelling of the word should not end when he/she adds a letter. If it does, he/she is out. Then start with a new letter.

The student left, after the rest in the group are out, is the winner.

Tip : The word excite can be stretched to exciting instead of having it end with 'e'.

Priorities

Hold a discussion in the classroom to decide your priorities for this year's work. Together with your classmates and teacher, number the following in order of priority. You may add more features to this list.

- pronunciation
- speaking
- listening to English programmes on radio and TV
- reading something in English every day
- learning rules of grammar
- learning rules of punctuation
- learning to correct your own work
- writing independently
- memorising spellings
- copying words and lines from the board/books

(You may add to this list.)

En-trance

To empower ourselves in En..... , let us –

- en (delight in)
- en (make best efforts) to
- en (improve) our
- en (ask to find out) about
- en (imagine)
- en (make richer) our
- en (gain knowledge and understanding) ourselves!

■ ■ ■ Warming up! ■ ■ ■

1. There are many popular lines like :-

- ‘Life is a game – play it well’.
- ‘Life is a journey – keep going ahead’.

Discuss and write down a few such metaphorical lines about ‘life’. You can make them up yourselves.

- (2)

2. Prepare as many ‘acrostics’ using the word LIFE, as you can. Two examples are given below.

L ive	L iberty
I n	I ntegrity
F reedom	F raternity
E ver	E quality

You can turn it into a game, using a time-limit. Make sure your acrostics are related to ‘life’.

3. Listen carefully and write the word in the appropriate column.

Positive Feelings	Negative Feelings

Teacher : hopeful, lonely, happy, jealous, surprised, shy, loving, proud, cheerful, anxious, nervous, excited, embarrassed, scared, silly, comfortable, peaceful, depressed, enthusiastic, motivated, inspired, threatened, crushed, angry

- Note that it is possible to feel both kinds of emotions at the same time. Have you experienced it? Try to describe the situation in short.

Life

Life, believe, is not a dream,
So dark as sages say;
Oft a little morning rain
Foretells a pleasant day :

Sometimes there are clouds of gloom,
But these are transient all;
If the shower will make the roses bloom,
Oh, why lament its fall?

Rapidly, merrily,
Life's sunny hours flit by,
Gratefully, cheerily,
Enjoy them as they fly.

What though death at times steps in,
And calls our Best away?
What though Sorrow seems to win,
O'er hope a heavy sway?

Yet Hope again elastic springs,
Unconquered, though she fell,
Still buoyant are her golden wings,
Still strong to bear us well.

Manfully, fearlessly,
The day of trial bear,
For gloriously, victoriously,
Can courage quell despair!

- Charlotte Bronte

- ◆ What do the sages say?

The Swiss Family Robinson is a well-known adventure novel that people of many countries have enjoyed for more than two hundred years. It has also been made into graphic novels and films.

The novel, written by the Swiss clergyman Johann David Wyss, is not just an adventure. It aims at teaching young people values like self-reliance, determination, love for your family, co-operation and prudent use of resources. It also has good lessons relevant in natural sciences, good husbandry and even mathematics!

Some elements of the novel do stretch reality to a certain extent – but we must consider that it is a work of fiction and not a fact file. Given below is a synopsis – an outline of its basic story.

William, Elizabeth and their children had been travelling in a ship when the ship was caught in a great storm. The other passengers evacuated without them. William, and his family including the young children Fritz, Ernest, Jack and Franz, were left to survive alone. They weathered the great storm waiting in the ship's hold. The ship survived the night and the family found themselves within sight of a tropical desert island. The next morning, they decided to get to the island they could see beyond the reef. With much effort, they constructed a vessel out of tubs. After they filled the tubs with food and ammunition and all other articles of value they could safely carry, they rowed toward the island. Two dogs from the ship named Turk and Juno swam beside them. The ship's cargo of livestock, guns and powder, carpentry tools, books, a disassembled pinnace, and provisions had also survived.

Over the next few days, William (father) attached the floatable old kegs to one another and built a bow that curved around them. The family had landed successfully on the island. They set up a tent and softened the floor with armloads of grass they cut and spread to serve as their beds. They came to a grove of trees. One tree grew what looked like gourds on its trunk. The father told Fritz, the gourds would make excellent bowls and spoons, and they cut them into various utensils.

After some days, Elizabeth informed William that she wanted the family to move to a safer place. Their current camp was not only exposed but also very dry and hot. If they built a house up in one of the large trees, they would be safe from jackals. She described a perfect tree for the project, one whose trunk was nearly forty feet in diameter. The branches were very long and extended straight out from the trunk, making them perfect platforms for a structure. Later, when determining the height of the lowest branches, the father taught the boys geometry and how to use triangles to measure big objects. He measured a defined distance from the trunk, then he calculated angles using several measured rods, determining that the lowest branch was thirty feet off the ground.

The men knotted a rope at certain intervals and attached pieces of bamboo in each knot. Thus, they created their ladder. Father returned to the beach and collected driftwood, thinking it would be perfect to build a ‘sledge,’ on runners rather than wheels. Later, they used it to transport materials.

Meanwhile Elizabeth announced that the garden she had been tending was producing healthy plants. Corn, melons, pumpkins, and cucumbers were already growing. The next day, only the father and Fritz travelled to the woods, exploring and finding such exotic plants as one with waxy fruit, from which candles could be made. Fritz discovered a tree exuding a rubbery sap, from which his father claimed that they could make boots.

Thinking ahead of the next winter, father decided to create a place safe from the elements, a strong storage spot to protect themselves and their belongings. Fritz came up with the idea of a cave. Not finding one, they thought of carving out their own cave in the rock abutting their camping site. On the smooth face of the rock, father marked the dimensions for an opening and they picked away at the hard surface with their axes, chisels, hammers, and shovels. Over the next several days, the family cut windows in the rocks to allow for crosscurrents of air and for sunlight to enter the cave. When they had finished, they had four rooms, complete with a fireplace. They now had a new winter home.

Because of the low light, the cave house they had built felt oppressive. To remedy this, father and Jack rigged up a new light. They found a bamboo pole that would reach from the floor to the ceiling. Then after securing it, Jack climbed to the top of the pole and hung a large oil lamp that they had rescued from the ship.

One day, they found that one of the family's huts had been completely destroyed and the cultivated fields around it had been trampled and ruined. There were huge footmarks everywhere. Father saw massive damage to trees as well as many huge footprints, which he identified as belonging to an elephant herd.

The next morning, the family began to design a new defence to discourage all wild animals from entering their cultivated lands. They also finalised their ideas about the new residence. Rather than building a house on stilts, which the elephants could knock down easily, they would use four strong trees growing in a square near one another as the foundation. The trees were of equal size, approximately twelve feet apart. Thus, they built another safe home.

Ten years passed and the young boys were now young men, and their parents were very proud. They called the island New Switzerland. Many adventures occurred over the years.

On the shore of another island, Fritz had knocked down an albatross, which was threatening to attack him and found a rag tied to the large bird's leg. On the rag was a message that an Englishwoman had been stranded on the 'smoking rock.' Fritz had no idea how old the message was. His father suggested that "smoking rock" sounded like a reference to a volcano. Since there were no volcanoes in the vicinity, the bird might have come from hundreds of miles away. However, Fritz felt that someone needed his help, and he was determined to do his best to find the sender. Before returning home, he had written his own note on the rag, retied it to the albatross's leg, and had watched the bird fly off. The note told whoever received it "Do not despair. Help is near!" Fritz, then successfully, rescued the young woman, Jenny Montrose. Though shy at first, soon, she got used to living with the Robinson family.

One day, they saw a ship, which had laid anchor. An encampment had been set up on one of the smaller islands. After checking the people through their spyglass, Fritz and his father decided to announce themselves after they had returned home and cleaned it up. They did not want the crew to think they were savages. The next day, Fritz and his father, met the captain and told him their own history as well as Jenny's. To everyone's surprise, it had been Jenny's father who had inspired the captain's search; he believed his daughter was still alive after three years. The captain had decided to attempt to find her.

With a burst of celebration, the family, passengers, and crew of the British vessel headed towards New Switzerland. Everyone was amazed by the prosperity and good health of the survivors.

As the day ended, the father realised that decisions must be made about who wanted to stay on the island or return with the ship. Elizabeth and her husband did not wish to live anywhere but on the island. They had been there for so long and had grown used to their life. Jenny asked if anyone would support her return to England. Fritz was the first to respond. He offered cheers for ‘us’ who were going to Europe. Ernest, on the other hand, wanted to stay on the island. Jack also decided to stay back. Franz, the youngest boy, decided to join Fritz in leaving. Franz wanted a chance to receive an academic education. Before Fritz left, he told his parents of his love for Jenny and his wish to marry her.

The father had kept a record of all the adventures they had had on the island. He handed over the journals to the captain to be published. Then the ship departed.

3. In poetry, when a question is asked, not to get an answer, but to emphasise a point or fact, it is an example of Interrogation.

For example : • When can their glory fade? • Isn't it time for the autumn's glow?

From a popular book of poems/the internet, write down 3-4 examples of Interrogation used in poetry.

Have you ever seen...?

Have you ever seen a sheet on a river bed?
Or a single hair from a hammer's head?
Has the foot of a mountain any toes?
And is there a pair of garden hose?

Does the needle ever wink its eye?
Why doesn't the wing of a building fly?
Can you tickle the ribs of a parasol?
Or open the trunk of a tree at all?

Are the teeth of a rake ever going to bite?
Have the hands of a clock any left or right?
Can the garden plot be deep and dark?
And what is the sound of the birch's bark?

- Anonymous

- hose : 1. a flexible tube 2. a pair of stockings or tights.
- parasol : umbrella
- plot : The word plot is also used to mean 'an evil or wicked plan'.
- birch : a tree

1.4 Have you thought of the verb ‘have’...

How many times do you use the verb ‘have’ in your conversation or writing? Try to keep a count of it for an hour or so. What do you find?

Perhaps you have always thought of this versatile verb as an auxiliary verb or a helping verb as we call it. The helping verb ‘have’ is used to form what we call perfect tenses (They have come! I had clean forgotten all about it!) and to make negative sentences (They haven’t come. I hadn’t forgotten it). But as a main verb, it is used to mean much more than you think!

Here are a few examples we use very frequently:

✿ In the following sentences, ‘have’ indicates possession or ownership of something:

1. My friend has a pet cat. (possession)
2. I have a new pen.
3. Do you have a cycle?
4. Our school has six computers. (ownership)
5. The Municipality has six vans and two cars.

✿ In some cases, ‘have’ is used to indicate relationships:

1. I have two sisters.
2. The couple do not have children.
3. I don’t have a brother.

✿ We also use have to refer to eating or drinking:

1. We have breakfast at 8 am.
2. Have a slice of cake.
3. What would you like to have – tea or coffee?
4. Can I have a glass of water, please?

✿ We also use have to refer to events, activities and experiences:

1. I am going to have a bath in the river.
2. Let us have a party for your birthday.
3. The class has a short break at 11 AM.
4. Did you have a good time at the wedding?
5. I have a meeting this evening.

✿ Have is also used to refer to a medical/physical condition:

1. I have a headache.
2. He has a cold.
3. Grandfather had a heart attack.

In sentences where ‘have’ is used as a main verb, it is always used in the simple present or past. The present continuous form is not used in such cases. We do not say –

- I am having a bicycle. X
- He is having a cold. X
- I am having a lot of homework. X

Similarly, it is not used in the negative form as a main verb.

- He hasn’t a car. X
- I haven’t a cold. X

To indicate the negative, we use the auxiliary ‘do’ along with the main verb ‘have’.

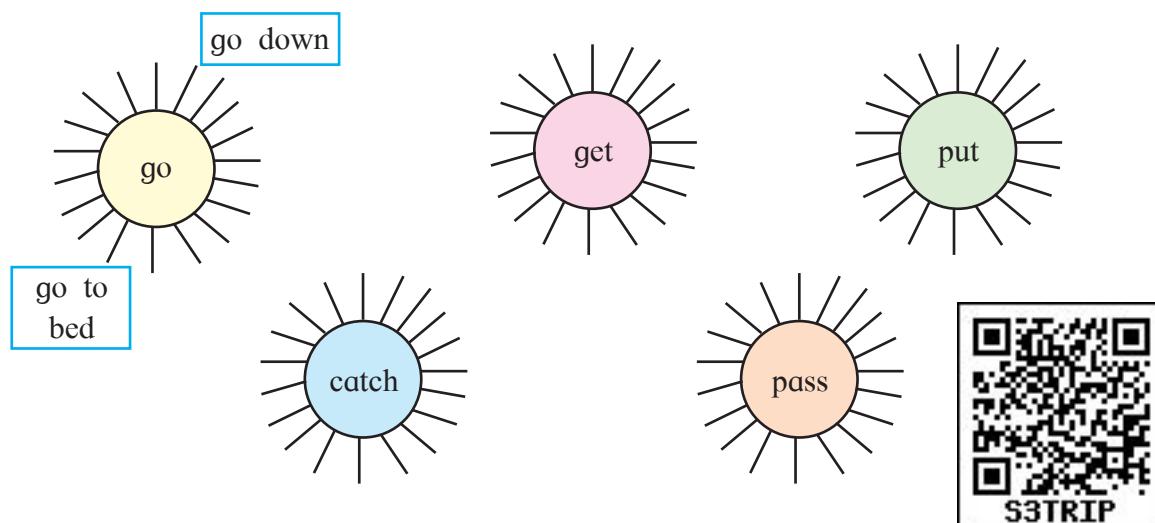

- He doesn’t have a car.
- I don’t have a cold.

Have fun exploring the uses of ‘have’!

Talking about Myself

Write a few lines about yourself – your name, appearance, family, the place where you live, your school, your friends, neighbours, relatives, your likes, dislikes, hobbies, what you are good at, etc.

Now create an imaginary ‘persona’ for yourself. It can be quite different from your real self. Or, you may choose a fictional character – a character from a novel, story, etc. Write a few lines about this imaginary persona and introduce yourself in that role.

My Dream Possession

Is there something that you would like to own more than anything else? Describe your dream possession with the help of the following points. You may add your own points, too.

The Necklace

Part I

- ◆ Why was Mathilde married to a ‘minor official’?

Reflection :

Is anyone entitled to all luxuries of life due to reasons of birth or other innate qualities?

- ◆ Why did Mathilde weep with misery after visiting her schoolmate?
- ◆ What did the envelope hold?

M. stands for Monsieur and Mme stands for Madame, French terms of address (like Mr and Mrs in English).

Mathilde was a pretty and charming girl, born, as if by an error of fate, into a family of clerks. She had no means of becoming known, understood, loved or be wedded to an aristocrat; and so she let herself be married to a minor official at the Ministry of Education.

She dressed plainly, because she had never been able to afford anything better. She suffered endlessly, feeling she was entitled to all the luxuries of life. She suffered because of her shabby, poorly furnished house. All these things, that another woman of her class would not even have noticed, tormented her and made her resentful. She dreamed of a grand, palatial mansion, with vast rooms and inviting smaller rooms, perfumed for afternoon chats with close friends.

Yet, she had no rich dresses, no jewels, nothing; and these were the only things she loved. She wanted so much to charm, to be envied, to be sought after.

She had a rich friend, a former schoolmate at the convent, whom she avoided visiting, because afterwards she would weep with regret, despair and misery.

One evening her husband came home with an air of triumph, holding a large envelope in his hand. “Look,” he said, “here’s something for you.”

She tore open the paper and drew out a card, on which was printed the words:

“The Minister of Education and Mme. Georges Rampouneau request the pleasure of M. and Mme. Loisel’s company at the Ministry, on the evening of Monday, January 18th.”

Instead of being delighted, as her husband had hoped, she threw the invitation on the table resentfully, and muttered, “What do you want me to do with that? And what do you expect me to wear if I go?”

He hadn’t thought of that. He stammered, “Why, the dress you go to the theatre in. It seems very nice to me ...”

He stopped, stunned, distressed to see his wife crying. He stuttered, “What’s the matter? Let’s see, Mathilde. How much would a suitable dress cost?”

She thought for a moment, computing the cost, and also wondering what amount she could ask for without an immediate refusal. At last she answered hesitantly, “I don’t know exactly, but I think I could do it with four hundred francs.”

He turned a little pale, because he had been saving that exact amount to buy a gun for a hunting summer, in the country near Nanterre, with a few friends. However, he said, “Very well, I can give you four hundred francs. But try and get a really beautiful dress.”

The day of the party drew near, and Madame Loisel seemed sad, restless, anxious, though her dress was ready.

One evening her husband said to her, “What’s the matter? You’ve been acting strange these last three days.”

She replied: “I’m upset that I have no jewels, not a single stone to wear. I would rather not go to the party.”

“You could wear flowers,” he said, “They are very fashionable at this time of year.”

She was not convinced.

The next day she went to her friend’s house and told her of her distress.

Madame Forestier went to her mirrored wardrobe, took out a large box, brought it back, opened it, and said to Madame Loisel:

“Choose, my dear.”

First Mathilde saw some bracelets, then a pearl necklace. She tried on the jewellery in the mirror.

She kept asking, “You have nothing else?”

- ◆ Was the husband a considerate person? How do we know that?

- ◆ Why did Mathilde go to her friend’s house and tell her of her distress?

- ◆ What did Madame Forestier’s large box contain?

- ◆ Which sentences tell us that Mathilde greatly desired the necklace?
- ◆ Try to express the thoughts that must have passed through Mathilde's mind on seeing the necklace, in Mathilde's own words.

Think and answer:

- ◆ Why did Mathilde not notice the loss of her necklace earlier?

- rapturously : with great joy
- panic-stricken : with a sudden feeling of fear
- distraught : worried, disturbed

"Why, yes. But I don't know what you like."

Suddenly she discovered, in a black satin box, a superb diamond necklace, and her heart began to beat with uncontrolled desire. Her hands trembled as she took it. She fastened it around her neck and stood lost in ecstasy as she looked at herself.

Then she asked anxiously, hesitating, "Would you lend me this, just this?"

"Why, yes, of course."

She threw her arms around her friend's neck, rapturously, then fled with her treasure.

The day of the party arrived. Madame Loisel was a success. She was prettier than all the other women, elegant, gracious, smiling, and full of joy.

She danced wildly, with passion, forgetting everything in the triumph of her beauty and success, floating in a cloud of happiness.

Mathilde and her husband left at about four o'clock in the morning. When they were finally in the street, they could not find a cab. They walked down toward the Seine, till they found one. They were dropped off at their door in the Rue des Martyrs, and sadly, it was all over, for her.

In front of the mirror, she took a final look at herself in all her glory. But suddenly she uttered a cry. She no longer had the necklace round her neck!

"What is the matter?" asked her husband.

She turned towards him, panic-stricken, "I have... I have... I no longer have Madame Forestier's necklace."

He stood up, distraught, "What!... how! ...That's impossible!"

Write your phrases using each of type of determiner.

Part II

- ◆ What efforts did Loisel make to find the necklace?

- ◆ What is implied in
 - ‘a hollow’, ‘pale figure’?

Note the expressions:

- glimmer of hope
- sick with grief and anguish

- cloak : a garment worn over other clothes. It has no sleeves and fastens at the neck.
- glimmer : faint, wavering light.

- jewel : Here, it means the diamond necklace.

They looked in the folds of her dress, in the folds of her cloak, in her pockets, everywhere. But they could not find it.

“Are you sure you still had it on when you left the hall?” he asked.

“Yes. I touched it in the hall at the Ministry.”

“But if you had lost it in the street we would have heard it fall. It must be in the cab.”

“Yes. That’s probably it. Did you take his number?”

“No.”

They stared at each other, stunned. At last Loisel put his clothes on again. “I’m going back,” he said, “Over the whole route we walked, and see if I can find it.”

He left. She remained in her ball dress all night, her mind blank. Her husband returned at about seven o’clock. He had found nothing.

He went to the police, to the newspapers to offer a reward, to the cab companies, everywhere the tiniest glimmer of hope led him.

She waited all day, in despair at this frightful disaster.

Loisel returned in the evening, a hollow, pale figure; he had found nothing. “You must write to your friend,” he said, “tell her you have broken the clasp of her necklace and that you are having it mended. It will give us time to look some more.”

She wrote as he dictated.

At the end of one week they had lost all hope. And Loisel, who suddenly looked aged, declared, “We must consider how to replace the jewel.”

And so, they went from jeweller to jeweller, looking for a necklace like the other one, consulting their memories, both sick with grief and anguish.

In a shop at the Palais Royal, they found a string of diamonds which seemed to be exactly what they were looking for. It was worth forty thousand francs. They could have it for thirty-six thousand.

So they begged the jeweller not to sell it for three days. And they made an arrangement that he would take it back for thirty-four thousand francs if the other necklace was found before the end of February.

Loisel had eighteen thousand francs which his father had left him. He would borrow the rest.

And he did borrow. He gave notes, made ruinous agreements, dealt with every type of money-lender. Then he went to get the new necklace, and laid down on the jeweller's counter thirty-six thousand francs.

When Madame Loisel took the necklace back, Madame Forestier said coldly, "You should have returned it sooner, I might have needed it."

From then on, Madame Loisel knew the horrible life of the very poor. But she played her part heroically. The dreadful debt must be paid. She would pay it. They dismissed their maid; they changed their lodgings; they rented a garret under the roof.

She came to know the drudgery of housework, the odious labours of the kitchen. She washed the dishes, the dirty linen, she carried the garbage down to the street every morning, and carried up the water, stopping at each landing to catch her breath and dressed like a commoner. She had to bargain at markets, quarrel and face insults over every miserable sou.

Each month they had to pay some loans, renew others, get more time.

Her husband worked extra, every evening, doing accounts for a tradesman, and often, late into the night, he sat copying a manuscript at five sous a page.

And this life lasted ten years. At the end of ten years they had paid off everything, even the interest.

Madame Loisel looked old now. Often, she brooded over the past – What would have happened if she had not lost that necklace? How strange life is, how fickle! How little is needed for one to be ruined or saved!

One Sunday, as she was walking in the Champs Élysées suddenly she saw Madame Forestier, still young, still beautiful, still charming.

- ◆ What was the arrangement with the jeweller?
Do you think it was fair?

Discuss :

- ◆ Why did Madame Forestier speak coldly to Mathilde?
- ◆ What is meant by 'the horrible life of the very poor'?
- ◆ What contrast is implied by the use of the word 'still' in still young, still beautiful, still charming?

• ruinous : leading to a heavy loss, ruin

• sou : French coin of low value used in the past

• garret : a small, uncomfortable room at the top of the house.

• brooded : thought sadly, unhappily

- ◆ Why did Mathilde decide to speak to her friend?

Madame Loisel felt emotional. Should she speak to her? Yes, of course. And now that she had paid, she would tell her all. Why not?

She went up to her, "Good morning, Jeanne."

The other, astonished to be addressed so familiarly by this common woman, did not recognise her. She stammered:

"But—Madame—I don't know. You must have made a mistake."

"No, I am Mathilde Loisel."

Her friend uttered a cry, "Oh! ... my poor Mathilde, how you've changed! ..."

"Yes, I have had some hard times since I last saw you, and many miseries ... and all because of you! ..."

"Me? How can that be?"

"You remember that diamond necklace that you lent me to wear to the Ministry party?"

"Yes. Well?"

"Well, I lost it."

"What do you mean? You brought it back."

"I brought you back another exactly like it. And it has taken us ten years to pay for it. It wasn't easy for us, we had very little. But at last it is over, and I am very glad."

Madame Forestier was stunned.

"You say that you bought a diamond necklace to replace mine?"

"Yes; you didn't notice then? They were very similar."

And she smiled with proud and innocent pleasure.

Madame Forestier, deeply moved, took both her hands.

"Oh, my poor Mathilde! Mine was an imitation! It was worth five hundred francs at most! ..."

It is our world, too!

1. Observe the following photographs. What is common among all these animals? They are all endangered species. They are likely to die out completely, one of the reasons being human activity in their habitat. If these animals could think and speak like humans, what would they say?

Form groups of 5-8. Prepare short autobiographical speeches for each of these animals (10-15 lines). Use the following points :

- How the animal lives – It's the only way he/she can.
 - How he interacts with nature and other animals.
 - How humans interact with that species – whether it is fair, necessary or desirable, etc.
 - The possible ill effects of the way human beings treat the animals, for the whole living world.
 - The animal getting ready to bid farewell to this world.
2. Hold a classroom discussion on the following topics and later on, expand the themes on your own. (10-15 lines)
 - Why human beings need to use more and more natural resources.
 - Should we conserve only the most beautiful and most useful things in nature?
 - What is ‘beautiful’ or ‘useful’? Who has the right to decide that?

A True Story of Sea Turtles

We were surveying the white bellied sea-eagles in the summer that year. As we roamed the coasts, one of the volunteers in our team saw some shallow pits with white egg shells nearby. Enquiries with the villagers revealed that they were turtle eggs. This came as a surprise. We had never come across turtle eggs in our walks along the beaches of Konkan in all these years. We decided to study this unusual occurrence further. We learnt that the beach where we had found the egg shells had been sealed to the public for nearly one month, after people smuggling silver bricks were caught in that area. But what we learnt further shocked us to the core.

Turtles nest along the entire coastline of our State. There are a few people in every village who keep combing the beach in the early hours of the morning, throughout the year. When the female turtle comes on shore to nest and to lay eggs, she leaves behind a trail just like a track of wheels on the sand. The egg hunters follow this trail right up to the nest which is about half a metre deep. They dig up the nest, and steal all the 100-150 eggs that are laid inside. These eggs are then either eaten or are sold in the market. If a turtle is spotted while it is still laying eggs, it is allowed to live till the laying is over. As soon as the eggs are laid, it is caught, and then killed and eaten. This ruthless practice is observed in all parts of the world. However, in India, sea turtles have been given protection by including them under Schedule I of the Indian Wildlife (Protection) Act 1972. That means turtles have been given as much protection as tigers. Therefore, all this business of gathering turtle eggs and killing turtles is carried on in a secret, hush-hush manner. This information was distressing. We began to think seriously about it. We decided to undertake a project for the protection and conservation of turtles and their nests in Maharashtra.

- ◆ What unusual occurrence did the volunteers notice?
- ◆ Why were turtle eggs seen on the beach after it had been sealed to the public? What were the implications?

- ◆ Why have these turtles been protected in India?

We had no experience regarding sea-turtles, so first of all we undertook a study of turtles. We contacted institutes that work for the protection of turtles in India. The next step was launching a Turtle Protection Campaign at Velas, Taluka Mandangad, District Ratnagiri. This was done with the support and co-operation of the Forest Department. As part of the campaign, a few local people were specially appointed to look for turtle nests on the beach in the morning. When they came across a nest, they had to carefully remove the eggs from the nest, and bury them again in a similar pit, but one protected with wire fencing. They had to watch over the protected nest to prevent thefts. In the first year, we could successfully protect 50 nests in this manner. When the babies hatched out of the eggs, what an event that was! The whole village rushed to the beach to witness the spectacle. When the tiny turtle hatchlings hurried across the silver sands to meet the rolling boundless sea, what an ovation they received from the onlookers! Some of the elderly villagers confessed that though they had seen (and stolen) turtle eggs right from their school days, it was for the first time that they had seen the hatchlings rushing to the sea.

- ◆ Why were the people asked to look for the eggs or nests in the morning?

- ◆ The elderly persons had seen the hatchlings for the first time. What does it indicate?

There are seven types of sea turtles in the world, five of which are found in India. The Olive Ridley turtles nest along the entire coastline of Maharashtra. Green turtles and Hawksbills have also been found. An amazing characteristic of turtles is that when the female turtle reaches maturity, that is, nearly after a gap of 15 years, she returns to the shore to lay her eggs at the same place where she was born. The female comes on shore, just to make a nest in the sand and lay her eggs, and immediately returns to the sea. She does not return to the nest after that. The eggs hatch after a period of 45 to 50 days, using natural heat. Innumerable dangers await the little hatchlings in the deep sea, and they have to face them all on their own. Their survival rate is therefore as low as just one or two turtles out of a thousand. Turtles perform an important function – they keep the sea clean. Thus, they occupy an important place in marine ecology. Considering all these factors, it is vital to undertake their protection on a large scale.

After the success at Velas, we started implementing the project in other places too. Within five years, the entire coastline of Maharashtra was surveyed. Protection was offered in eighty of the villages where turtle nests were found. Our strategy was to engage those who had so far been involved in stealing the eggs, then to train and involve them in the work of protection. We started the ‘Turtle Friend Awards’ (Kasav Mitra) to encourage more people to be a part of the protection campaign. A comprehensive booklet and a short film on the protection of turtles was prepared to spread the message.

The year 2006 saw the beginning of a novel concept – Turtle Festival or Kasav Mahotsava – an opportunity for tourists to witness the unique spectacle of the hatchlings rushing out to the sea. A short film on turtles and the natural beauty of Konkan were additional features of the festival. At the same time, we were quite firm on one issue – the hatchlings should not come to even the slightest harm due to this tourist activity. The tourists were accommodated in the homes of the villagers. The response to this novel concept of ‘homestay’ was excellent. A Turtle Friends Club was established in each village, the members being all the villagers offering ‘homestay’. All villages would now offer the same rate for ‘homestay’. They gave ten percent of their income from ‘homestay’ for the Turtle Protection Fund. The fund would be utilised for the purpose of protection and conservation of turtles. Modern technology also helped. The festival reached all corners of the world through the medium of the internet and our website. People around the world began to contact the small villages

- ◆ Why was it necessary to undertake turtle protection on a large scale?

- ◆ Why were those who had stolen the eggs earlier involved in the work of protection? Give at least two reasons.

Protect the turtles and enrich the seas!

of Konkan. More and more villagers came forward to do this work and the number of ‘homestay’ families went up to 35. As many as eight hundred people began to visit Velas in the Turtle Season. This meant more business for the villagers. Now they realised that tourism can be a source of income. Tourists bring in money, and in order to earn that money, it was important to protect the turtle hatchlings. This was ‘Conservation of Nature through Livelihood’ in its true sense. Velas became the project’s main success story.

Sahyadri Nisarg Mitra, our organisation believed that it is only the local villagers who can ultimately offer excellent protection to the local species. If they are given the freedom to do that, the conservation projects became sustainable. With this belief, we entrusted the project to the Forest Department, the Gram Panchayat, the villagers and their Turtle Friends Club. All of them are handling it wonderfully. Now we are happy to see the project running smoothly and offer help only when necessary.

Somebody's Mother

The woman was old and ragged and gray,
And bent with the chill of a winter's day;
The streets were white with a recent snow,
And the woman's feet with age were slow.

At the crowded crossing she waited long,
Jostled aside by the careless throng
Of human beings who passed her by,
Unheeding the glance of her anxious eye.

Down the street with laughter and shout,
Glad in the freedom of 'school let out',
Came happy boys, like a flock of sheep,
Hailing the snow piled white and deep;
Past the woman, so old and gray,
Hastened the children on their way.

None offered a helping hand to her,
So weak and timid, afraid to stir,
Lest the carriage wheels or the horses' feet
Should trample her down in the slippery street.

At last came out of the merry troop
The gayest boy of all the group;
He paused beside her and whispered low,
'I'll help you across, if you wish to go.'

Her aged hand on his strong young arm
She placed, and so without hurt or harm
He guided the trembling feet along,
Proud that his own were young and strong;
Then back again to his friends he went,
His young heart happy and well content.

The Fall of Troy

Part I

- ◆ How were epics transmitted from generation to generation?
- ◆ Have you seen any of these stories in TV serials or movies?
- ◆ Who are considered to be the authors of epics ‘Ramayana’ and ‘Mahabharata’ respectively?
- ◆ Why is Homer honoured with the title ‘Father of European Poetry’?

Epics are long poems that relate the deeds of a great national hero or a great national war. They often tell of a nation’s early history. They may be composed and sung or recited for many years before they are actually written down.

The two famous Sanskrit epics are The Ramayana and The Mahabharata, and the two great epics of European literature, written in ancient Greek, are The Iliad and The Odyssey. Just as in Indian literature we go back to stories from The Ramayana and The Mahabharata, so in the literature of western countries, they go back to The Iliad and The Odyssey. Just as children all over India know the names of stories of Ram and Sita, Yudhishtira and Arjuna and Draupadi, so children in western countries know the names of Hector and Odysseus and Achilles and Helen of Troy, the most beautiful woman in the world, because of whom the Greek and Trojans fought for ten long years.

Nobody knows for certain who the author of these early epics is. It is thought that they arose and developed with the nation itself, and were handed down from singer to singer till perhaps one great poet gave them their final form.

It is believed that The Iliad and The Odyssey were composed and recited by a blind poet named Homer, who lived about 900 BCE and who wandered from one Greek city or village to another, singing his poems to all who would receive him in their homes and give him hospitality. This wandering singer has been honoured through the ages, not only in Greece but in all Europe, as the Father of European Poetry.

The Iliad is the story of Ilium or Troy, a rich trading city in Asia Minor near the narrow sea that leads from the Aegean to the Black Sea. It was well situated, both for commerce and agriculture. In front of the city was the sea over which sailed the ships of Troy, carrying goods and grain. At the back rose the high peak of Mount Ida, from which flowed many rivers and streams. The valleys among the hills were well-watered and fertile, with corn growing in fertile fields and cattle feeding on the rich grass of the meadows while sheep fed on the slopes of the hills.

Round their city the Trojans had built a strong wall so that no enemy should attack them from the sea. The wall was so broad that people could stand and sit and walk on it. The great gates stood open, and people could go to the seashore outside and come in as they pleased. But in time of war the gates would be closed; and then the city was like a strong fortress, quite safe from all attack, protected by the walls surrounding it, as well as by the hills behind.

Thus, Troy was a strong city, strongly protected by its walls and strongly defended by its brave soldiers. But all the kings and heroes of Greece had declared war against the Trojans, because Paris, a prince of Troy, had persuaded Helen, wife of a Greek king Menelaus, to elope with him. He had brought her to Troy. The Greeks wanted to take revenge on Troy for the wrong done to Menelaus. They sailed to Troy and laid siege to the city. The Trojans, too, fought hard and the siege continued for ten long years.

The fighting went on daily, but the siege did not end. On the one hand, the Greeks could not take the city, and on the other hand the Trojans could not force them to sail away. Every day the Trojans came out of their gates, and the Greeks came out of their tents and ships, and the fighting went on. Sometimes there were great battles between the two armies. Sometimes there were single fights between two great heroes. Sometimes the Trojans had the better of it and sometimes the Greeks. But still the fighting went on.

Great heroes on both sides were killed in the course of the war. After leading the defence of his city for nine years, the brave Hector was at last killed by Achilles, whom none could resist. But Achilles himself was killed later on by a poisoned arrow that entered

- ◆ How did Odysseus plan to defeat the Trojans?

At last Troy was taken, not by force but by a trick. It was the cunning Odysseus who thought of a plan to obtain the victory.

"Let us build a great wooden horse", he said, "big enough to hold men inside it, and let some of our best fighters hide in the horse. Then let us burn our tents and pretend to sail away in our ships. But instead of sailing away, we will return in the night. When the Trojans are asleep, we will attack the city and burn and kill."

The Greek leaders decided to follow the advice of the wise Odysseus. So a great horse of wood was made by a skilful engineer, and the greatest heroes, Menelaus, Odysseus himself, and others entered it, the last man to go in being the architect himself who knew the secret of opening and shutting the entrance. That evening the Greeks burned their tents and sailed away in their ships, but they did not go very far. Only one man was left behind to persuade the Trojans to drag the horse into their city.

Next day the Trojans woke up, expecting to go out and fight as they had done for the past ten years. What delight and surprise they felt at the sight they saw on the seashore outside the walls ! It seemed that the long siege was over at last. The tents had been burnt. The shore was deserted. The Greek ships had all gone.

"It's peace at last," they cried, and opened wide their gates and came out in large numbers on the plain, glad to be free again to go where they pleased. Then they saw on the sands the huge, wooden horse. They gathered round it in astonishment, for it was indeed a wonderful piece of work.

As they were wondering how the horse had been built and why it had been left behind, they found a Greek with his hands tied together lying under it. When the Trojans dragged him out, the man pretended to be very frightened of them. When he was commanded to tell them why the Greeks had gone and why they had left this horse behind, he pretended to tremble very much and refused to speak. When at last they threatened

Think and answer:

- ◆ Was it enough to use the wooden horse to hide?

What was done to make the Trojans take it inside the city?

to kill him, he spoke and told them this false tale.

"The Greeks are tired of the long war and have sailed away in their ships," he said. "But they are afraid of the long voyage home too, and so they have made this horse and left it as an offering to the god of the sea. They wanted also to kill me and offer me as a sacrifice to the sea-god; but I escaped and hid from them."

"But why did the Greeks make such a huge horse?" some of the Trojans asked. And the cunning Greek made this reply : "If they had made a smaller offering, you might have taken it into your city. Then the luck would have gone to the Trojans and not to the Greeks. That is why they made it too big to go inside your gates."

The Trojans were delighted to hear this. "The Greeks have gone," they said, "and the walls are no longer necessary. Let us make a hole in the wall and drag the horse in."

Their wise priest warned them not to do so. "It may be a trick that will ruin us," he said. "You will bring disaster on the city if you break down the walls," But they were so excited that they paid no attention to his words. They broke down part of their strong wall in order to drag the horse in.

All that day the Trojans feasted and drank and celebrated. After all their celebrations, they went to sleep and slept soundly. But that day of rejoicing was soon followed by a night of terror and death.

The Greek ships had not sailed far. As soon as they were hidden by an island, they had lowered their sails and dropped anchor and waited for the night. In the darkness the fleet sailed back, and the leading ship, which was Agamemnon's, bore a red light high on its mast. The Greek, who was watching for the return of the fleet, crept to the wooden horse and gave the signal. The side of the horse opened, the Greeks climbed out and opened the gates. The whole Greek army entered the sleeping city. Immediately the Greeks set fire to houses and towers and palaces, and began to burn and kill.

◆ How did the Greeks enter the city of Troy?

◆ How did the Greek ships remain hidden from Troy?

- ◆ What distressing sounds and sights could be witnessed at Troy, that fateful night?
- ◆ What was the destiny of the royal family of Troy and that of Helen?

Troy was filled with the sight of leaping flames and the sound of shouting and the noise of weapons and the cries of weeping women. The sleeping Trojans sprang out of their beds, but they were taken by surprise. Their enemies were right inside their walls, and many of the Trojans were killed before they could put on their armour and seize their weapons.

A bright light lit up the night sky as palaces and houses, temples and towers, went up in flames. The Trojans fought as well as they could, but it was all in vain. Old King Priam was killed with all his brave sons. Hector's wife and his old mother and sister were carried off as slaves by the conquerors. Their fate was in contrast to Helen's when King Menelaus rushed through the city, looking for her and found her in her palace. She hung her head in shame and sorrow as she faced her former husband. Her voice was choked with emotion and she could not speak. But Menelaus forgave her and she went back with him, for it was only Aphrodite who had turned her heart away from her home and her husband and her child.

When morning came, nothing was left of the proud, rich city that had resisted attack for ten years.

Scene - A typical teenage boy's room, in a messed up state.

- Neel : Mom, I put the dishes in the dishwasher, just as you asked me to. Now I am going out to meet my friends. (Enter Mom in a mod outfit.)
- Mom : You haven't cleaned up your room.
- Neel : Awww ! I cleaned it only 2 days ago.
- Mom : You have to clean it up every day.
- Neel : (Picking up his books, clothes, head phones, etc. from the floor and bed and putting them in their places.) Is it necessary to clean up every day? What difference does it make?
- Mom : It does ! It builds up the right habits, the right attitude.....
- Neel : (Cuts her short) All right! All right! I get enough of lectures when school is on.
- Mom : (After Neel finishes his chores) That looks much better now. But you forgot to make your bed. Do that and you may go out.
- Neel : (Irritated) Mom! It's getting late! The bed is going to be messed up again, when I sleep after lunch. Why do I have to make my bed? Why?
- Mom : Hmm..... That reminds me of something I heard about your Grandpa, when he was in his teens. He had many more daily chores to finish and much tougher ones too.

Mom : On that day his mom had told him firmly -----

(A teenage boy from 1950s wearing loose trousers and shirt, enters with his mother in a silk saree.)

The Boy's Mother : Make your bed, before going out.

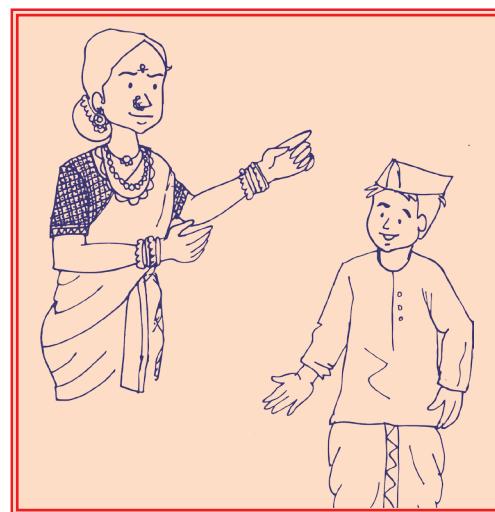

1950s Boy : But Mama I have already watered the garden, brought home the groceries, dusted the living room, cleaned my bicycle. Now why do I need to make my bed?

The Boy's Mother : (To her son) Let me tell you about your grand-father in his teens.

(1950s boy and mother recede and stand behind and 1910 boy enters dressed in kurta-pyjamas and cap with his mother in a nine-yard saree, nose ring and jewellery)

1910 Mother : You can't go out unless you make your bed.

1910 Boy : Mummy, I fetched water and filled up the pots, swept the terrace, collected wood for the stove, cleaned the grinding stones.

Neel : (To his mom) What are grinding stones? Ahhh! Yes! They didn't have any electric grinders in those days!

Mom : No electricity either in most towns and cities, in India, then.

(Neel looks surprised)

1910 Boy : I promised to go to the riverside with my friends. Why do I have to make my bed now ?

The Boy's Mother : (To her son) Let me tell you about your great-grandfather who lived in the 19th century. When he was young...

(1910 boy and mother recede to where the previous pair stands. 1800 boy enters in dhoti, kurta and small turban with his mother in a nine-yard saree and traditional jewellery)

1800 Mother : Son, make everyone's beds.

1800 Boy : Mother dear, I have washed clothes at the river and put them up to dry. I also chopped the wood, fixed the broken fence, took the goats up the hill to graze. I want to play atya-patya with my friends. Why do I have to make the beds?

The Boy's Mother : That's your daily work. Your great, great grandfather did even more. Now go and make the beds.

(1800 boy and mother recede to where the previous pairs stand. Enters 1500 boy dressed in a loose sleeveless V-neck top and short dhoti with his mother in a nine-yard saree.)

Neel : And this forefather of mine is from—?

Mom : The 16th century.

1500 Boy : My dear mother, I have already milked the cows, taken them to graze, fetched vegetables from our farm, stacked them, swept the back yard and front yard. Now may I please go to play Ashtapada with Sampatbhau and Mahadevbhau. Why should I make my bed now ?

The Boy's Mother : Why? Don't talk back. Think of your double great-great-great grandfather when he was about 14 years old.

(1500 boy and his mother recede. Enters 1000 boy in a flare tunic and churidar, waist band and turban with his mother in a saree, upper garment and plenty of jewellery)

1000 Boy : Most revered mother, I have fetched water from the lake and poured it into the farm channels to water our crops, I cleared the blocked channels and pulled out weeds. At home I patched the mud walls, where there were cracks. Now I have no time for anything else. I wish to go to watch the puppet show. Why do I have to make my bed?

The Boy's Mother : Do not grumble, dear son. Your triple great, triple great, triple great grandfather; had to do much more when he was your age.

(1000 boy and his mother recede. Enters 1st century CE boy dressed in a dhoti and a waist band – no shirt, and his mother in a saree and an upper garment, and beads jewellery.)

100 (CE) Boy : Matadevi, I fed the poultry, tended the sheep, kept the birds away for four hours in our field using a sling, also plastered the yard with dung.

100 (CE) Boy : I wish to go and play Bagh-chal with my friends now. Why do you wish me to make the beds, right now?

The Boy's Mother : Because that is what boys have to do. Let me tell you about your ancestor 3000 years ago.

(1st Century boy and mother recede. Enter boy from 3000 BCE. A cloth around the waist held by a cord, long hair in a bun or ponytail and his mother, saree, a veil, stone and beads jewellery.)

3000 (BCE) Boy : Me bow to thee ! Me hunted down the food for our family. Me helped father to carve stone bricks for our new house. Me dusted our leather clothes, moulded mud pots for cooking and put them to dry. Me need your kind permission to go and play Chaupar with me friends. Why dost thou needs me to make me bed ?

The Boy's Mother : Because me say so! Do it now.

(All mothers to their sons in turn repeat, 'Do it now', with the boys answering 'Yes, mother'.)

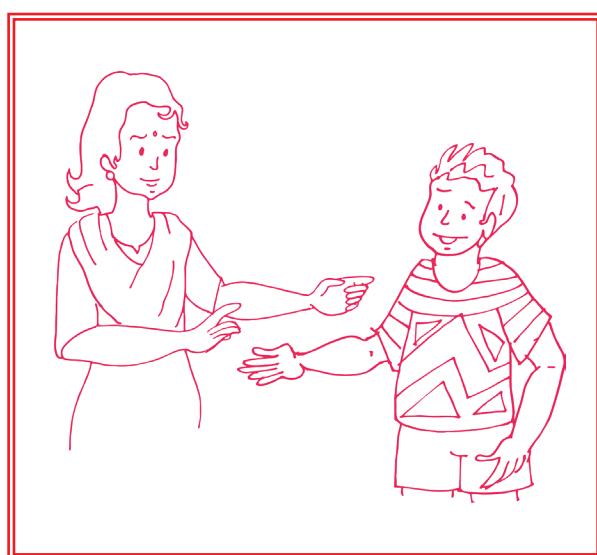

Neel : Ok, so young teenage boys have had chores to do outdoors as well as in their homes.

Mom : Very much so ! Absolutely right.

Neel : I wish I had a robot to make my bed and tidy up my room.

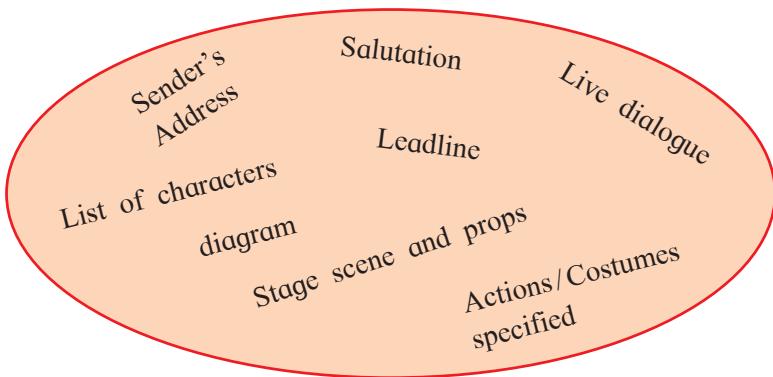

Mom : Nothing is impossible. If you try you can make such a robot. But even for that you need to work hard ! The bottom line is Go and make your bed.

Reading Works of Art

Sayed Haider Raza

Sayed Haider Raza, popularly known as Raza, was a renowned Indian artist. Simple geometric shapes, striking colour combinations, captivating compositions – these are some of the characteristic features of his paintings, and so are the colours blue and orange. You will find them in almost all his paintings. None of his paintings depict lifelike human figures or copies of scenes from his environment. His paintings belong to the abstract style of paintings. Such paintings are not inspired by any external factor. They originate when the artist tries to peep into his own inner mind. They are made by arranging circles, triangles, squares, rectangles, lines, dots in different compositions using effective techniques of applying paint, attractive colour combinations, achieving balance in some places and creating imbalance in other places.

Raza found his paintings through his study of Indian art and its heritage, cultural context and philosophy. His pictures seem to radiate peace and life at the same time. We realise that the painting is a visible form of very deep thought. Very few abstract paintings communicate with the viewers as much as Raza's do.

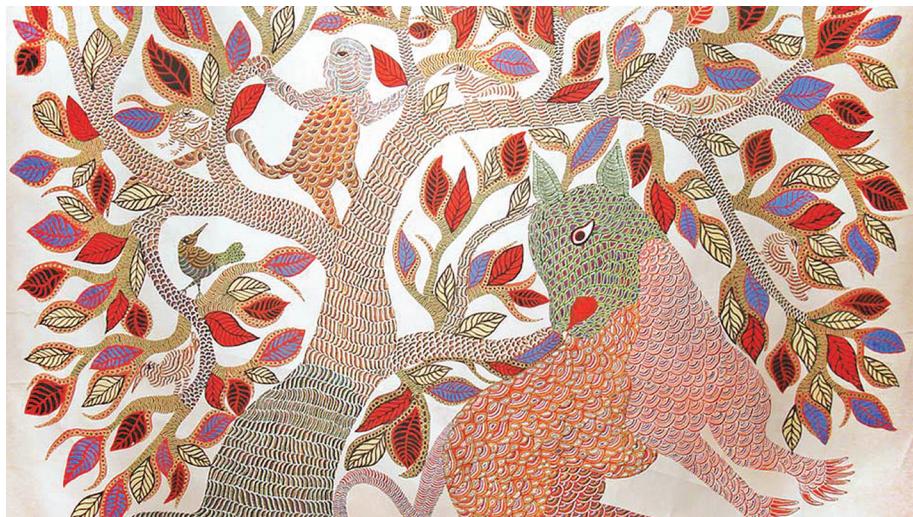

Raza was born in a small village in Madhya Pradesh. He began to paint from the age of twelve. He studied art at the 'Chitrakala Mahavidyalaya' at Nagpur and then at the J. J. School of Art in Mumbai. Later, he went to France to study Art. After a few years, he decided to settle in France. His wife was French. He won many national and international awards. He was honoured with all the three Padma awards – Padma Shri, Padma Bhushan and Padma Vibhushan. With all the awards and honours, his paintings were exploring a spiritual, metaphysical path. Gradually, the 'bindu' or point came to be the core of his paintings. He described his work in these words – 'My work is my own inner experience and involvement with the mysteries of nature and form which is expressed in colour, line, space and light'.

Sometimes, an artist's thoughts appear to be too complex or even complicated when they are expressed through words. For him, the effective medium of communication is his work – his paintings. Raza had great creativity. His paintings are very expressive. This great artist passed away on 23 July 2016 at the age of 94, leaving behind a legacy of sensitive paintings (achieved through extra-ordinary compositions of lines and colours) that depict extra-ordinary compositions.

Gond Art

Gond Art is a tribal art. It has been developed and preserved by the Gond tribal people residing largely in the Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, Telangana, Andhra Pradesh and Odisha States of India. From their traditional tales and mythology, we learn that they have lived in India for thousands of years even before the other inhabitants came here. The Gondi language is similar to Telugu, a Dravidian language.

Gond art has spread mainly in Central India. Originally, people used to draw pictures on the earthen walls of their houses. Most folk arts involve natural techniques of preparing colours and use of several mediums. They are transferred from generation to generation in a smoothly flowing process. Gond art is no exception to this. A house decorated with beautiful pictures creates a pleasant atmosphere. Also, art is a medium of recording and preserving what is seen.

In folk arts, you yourself prepare the ‘canvas’ – the surface on which to draw and the colours with which you draw. That is why creating folk art is a very enriching experience. This richness is reflected in the choice of their medium. In the days of past, several things in nature such as soils of different shades, the juice of plants, leaves, tree bark, flowers, fruits and even things like coal and cow-dung were used to prepare colours. The different colours, various textures and patterns were used year after year, lending a simplicity to the art. When we see these pictures, we realise that a picture drawn this way or the other can look equally beautiful. What a deep thought this art conveys – and so easily !

In the Gond style of art, we see that the outlines may vary a little from artist to artist but the designs that fill it make the whole picture look lively and attractive. The designs include simple textures achieved using dots, straight lines, dotted lines, curvy shapes and circles. Special attention is given to the choice of various colours so that the total effect is amazing and beautiful.

In today's age of commercialisation many men have taken up Gond art. But the roots of folk arts probably lie in women's daily chores like cleaning and decorating the house, dealing with natural colours in the course of cooking and in their leisure time activities.

2. Form pairs or groups of four. Think of the situations when you have to choose between two things. Make a list of those situations. Some of them may be minor or trivial things – for example, what to wear when going out. Some choices may be related to important things, for example, having to decide between games and studies, whether to confront a close friend about something that he/she did, owning up to your mistakes, etc.

- (a) Discuss how to decide what to choose.
- (b) Write what you feel when your decision proves right.
- (c) Write what you feel when you regret the decision.

The Road Not Taken

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveller, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there
Had worn them really about the same

- ◆ Why does the poet feel sorry?
- ◆ Did the poet choose the road quickly?
- ◆ Was one of the roads better than the other?
- ◆ Does the poet tell us what difference it made?

And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day !
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence :
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I –
I took the one less travelled by,
And that has made all the difference.

- Robert Frost

- diverge : separate and go in different directions
- wanted wear : needed to be used

How the First Letter was Written

Once upon a most early time was a Neolithic man and he lived cavily in a Cave, and he wore very few clothes, and he couldn't read and he couldn't write and he didn't want to, and except when he was hungry he was quite happy. His name was Tegumai Bopsulai, and that means, 'Man-who-does-not-put-his-foot-forward-in-a-hurry'; but we, O Best Beloved, will call him Tegumai, for short. And his wife's name was Teshumai Tewindrow, and that means, 'Lady-who-asks-a-very-many-questions'; but we, O Best Beloved, will call her Teshumai, for short. And his little girl-daughter's name was Taffimai Metallumai, and that means, 'Small-person-without-any-manners-who-ought-to-be-spanked'; but I'm going to call her Taffy. And she was Tegumai Bopsulai's Best Beloved and her own Mummy's Best Beloved, and she was not spanked half as much as was good for her; and they were all three very happy.

Now attend and listen!

One day Tegumai Bopsulai went down through the beaver-swamp to the Wagai river to spear carp-fish for dinner, and Taffy went too. Tegumai's spear was made of wood with shark's teeth at the end, and before he had caught any fish at all he accidentally broke it clean across by jabbing it down too hard on the bottom of the river. They were miles and miles from home and Tegumai had forgotten to bring any extra spears.

'Here's a pretty kettle of fish!' said Tegumai. 'It will take me half the day to mend this.'

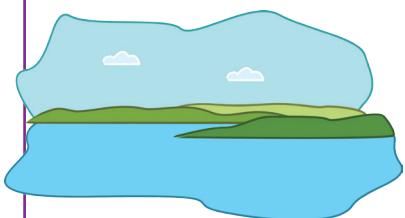

'There's your big black spear at home,' said Taffy. 'Let me run back to the Cave and ask Mummy to give it me.'

'It's too far for your little fat legs,' said Tegumai. 'Besides, you might fall into the beaver-swamp and be drowned. We must make the best of a bad job.' He sat down and took out a little leather mendy-bag, full of reindeer-sinews and strips of leather, and lumps of bee's-wax and resin, and began to mend the spear.

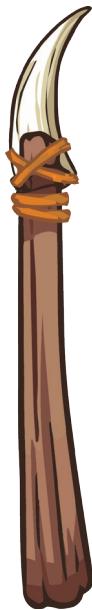

- ◆ Give one word for the meanings of each of the names:
 - Tengumai Bopsulai
 - Teshumai Tewindrow
 - Taffimai Metallumai.

- ◆ Who is the author telling this story to?

- swamp : a marshy land
- a pretty kettle of fish: a messy situation

- ◆ Why had Taffy stamped her foot? What did the stranger make of it ?

- hank : loosely tied bundle of strings

Taffy sat down too, with her toes in the water and her chin in her hand, and thought very hard. Then she said – ‘I say, Daddy, it’s an awful nuisance that you and I don’t know how to write, isn’t it? If we did, we could send a message for the new spear.’

Just then a Stranger-man came along the river, but he belonged to a far tribe, the Tewaras, and he did not understand one word of Tegumai’s language. He stood on the bank and smiled at Taffy, because he had a little girl-daughter of his own at home. Tegumai drew a hank of deer-sinews from his mendy-bag and began to mend his spear.

‘Come here’, said Taffy. ‘Do you know where my Mummy lives?’ And the Stranger-man said ‘Um!’

‘Silly!’ said Taffy, and she stamped her foot, because she saw a shoal of very big carp going up the river just when her Daddy couldn’t use his spear.

‘Don’t bother grown-ups,’ said Tegumai, so busy with his spear-mending that he did not turn round.

‘I aren’t’, said Taffy. ‘I only want him to do what I want him to do, and he won’t understand.’

‘Then don’t bother me’, said Tegumai, and he went on pulling and straining at the deer-sinews with his mouth full of loose ends. The Stranger-man – a genuine Tewara he was – sat down on the grass, and Taffy showed him what her Daddy was doing. The Stranger-man thought, ‘This is a very wonderful child. She stamps her foot at me and she makes faces. She must be the daughter of that noble Chief who is so great that he won’t take any notice of me.’ So he smiled more politely than ever.

‘Now,’ said Taffy, ‘I want you to go to my Mummy, because your legs are longer than mine, and you won’t fall into the beaver-swamp, and ask for Daddy’s other spear – the one with the black handle that hangs over our fireplace.’

The Stranger-man thought, ‘This is a very, very wonderful child. She waves her arms and she shouts at me, but I don’t understand a word of what she says.

But if I don't do what she wants, I greatly fear that, that haughty Chief, Man-who-turns-his-back-on-callers, will be angry.' He got up and twisted a big flat piece of bark off a birch-tree and gave it to Taffy. He did this, Best Beloved, to show that his heart was as white as the birch-bark and that he meant no harm; but Taffy didn't quite understand.

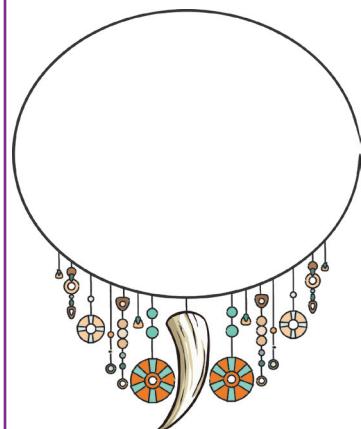

'Oh!' said she. 'Now I see! You want my Mummy's living-address? Of course I can't write, but I can draw pictures if I've anything sharp to scratch with. Please lend me the shark's tooth off your necklace.'

The Stranger-man (and he was a Tewara) didn't say anything, so Taffy put up her little hand and pulled at the beautiful bead and seed and shark-tooth necklace round his neck.

The Stranger-man (and he was a Tewara) thought, 'This is a very, very, very wonderful child. The shark's tooth on my necklace is a magic shark's tooth, and I was always told that if anybody touched it without my leave they would immediately swell up or burst, but this child doesn't swell up or burst, and that important Chief, Man-who-attends-strictly-to-his-business, who has not yet taken any notice of me at all, doesn't seem to be afraid that she will swell up or burst. I had better be more polite.'

So he gave Taffy the shark's tooth, and she lay down flat on her tummy with her legs in the air, like some people on the drawing-room floor when they want to draw pictures, and she said, 'Now I'll draw you some beautiful pictures! You can look over my shoulder, but you mustn't joggle. First I'll draw Daddy fishing. It isn't very like him; but Mummy will know, because I've drawn his spear all broken. Well, now I'll draw the other spear that he wants, the black-handled spear. It looks as if it was sticking in Daddy's back, but that's because the shark's tooth slipped and this piece of bark isn't big enough. That's the spear I want you to fetch; so I'll draw a picture of me myself 'splaining to you. My hair doesn't stand up like I've drawn, but it's easier to draw that way. Now I'll draw you. I think you’re very nice really, but I can’t make you pretty in the picture, so you mustn’t be ’fended. Are you ’fended?’

The Stranger-man (and he was a Tewara) smiled. He thought, ‘There must be a big battle going to be fought somewhere, and this extraordinary child, who takes my magic shark’s tooth but who does not swell up or burst, is telling me to call all the great Chief’s tribe to help him. He is a great Chief, or he would have noticed me.

‘Look,’ said Taffy, drawing very hard and rather scratchily, ‘now I’ve drawn you, and I’ve put the spear that Daddy wants into your hand, just to remind you that you’re to bring it. Now I’ll show you how to find my Mummy’s living-address. You go along till you come to two trees (those are trees), and then you go over a hill (that’s a hill), and then you come into a beaver-swamp all full of beavers. I haven’t put in all the beavers, because I can’t draw beavers, but I’ve drawn their heads, and that’s all you’ll see of them when you cross the swamp. Mind you don’t fall in! Then our Cave is just beyond the beaver-swamp. It isn’t as high as the hills really, but I can’t draw things very small. That’s my Mummy outside. She is beautiful. She is the most beautiful Mummy there ever was, but she won’t be ’fended when she sees I’ve drawn her so plain. She’ll be pleased of me because I can draw. Now, in case you forget, I’ve drawn the spear that Daddy wants outside our Cave. It’s inside really, but you show the picture to my Mummy and she’ll give it you. I’ve made her holding up her hands, because I know she’ll be so pleased to see you. Isn’t it a beautiful picture? And do you quite understand, or shall I ’splain again?’

The Stranger-man (and he was a Tewara) looked at the picture and nodded very hard. He said to himself, ‘If I do not fetch this great Chief’s tribe to help him, he will be slain by his enemies who are coming up on all sides with spears. Now I see why the great Chief pretended not to notice me! He feared that his enemies were hiding in the bushes and would see him. Therefore he turned to me his back, and let the wise and wonderful child draw the terrible picture showing me his difficulties. I will away and get help for him from his tribe.' He did not even ask Taffy the road, but raced off into the bushes like the wind, with the birch-bark in his hand, and Taffy sat down most pleased.

Now this is the picture that Taffy had drawn for him!

'What have you been doing, Taffy?' said Tegumai. He had mended his spear and was carefully waving it to and fro.

'It's a little berangement of my own, Daddy dear,' said Taffy. 'If you won't ask me questions, you'll know all about it in a little time, and you'll be surprised. You don't know how surprised you'll be, Daddy! Promise you'll be surprised.'

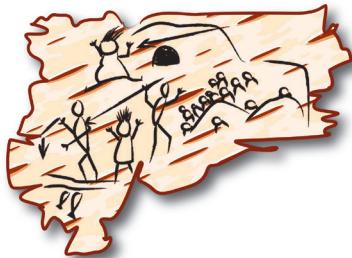

'Very well,' said Tegumai, and went on fishing.

The Stranger-man – did you know he was a Tewara? – hurried away with the picture and ran for some miles, till quite by accident he found Teshumai Tewindrow at the door of her Cave, talking to some other Neolithic ladies who had come in to a Primitive lunch. Taffy was very like Teshumai, especially about the upper part of the face and the eyes, so the Stranger-man – always a pure Tewara – smiled politely and handed Teshumai the birch-bark. He had run hard, so that he panted, and his legs were scratched with brambles, but he still tried to be polite.

As soon as Teshumai saw the picture she screamed like anything and flew at the Stranger-man. The other Neolithic ladies at once knocked him down and sat on him in a long line of six, while Teshumai pulled his hair.

'It's as plain as the nose on this Stranger-man's face,' she said. 'He has stuck my Tegumai all full of spears, and frightened poor Taffy so that her hair stands all on end; and not content with that, he brings me a horrid picture of how it was done. Look!' She

■ ■ ■ Warming up! ■ ■ ■Twenty Questions

Form groups of 6-8. One person (leader) chooses one item – a picture, a paragraph or a lesson from any one of the 9th standard textbooks and writes the reference on a slip of paper and folds it. Others ask him/her questions and try to guess what it is, from his/her answers. Follow the rules given below.

- The maximum number of questions the rest of the group can ask is 20.
- You cannot ask a direct question like ‘What do you have in mind?’
- You can ask ‘Wh-’ questions or ‘Yes/no’ questions.
- The leader has to give truthful answers.

Agreements and Disagreements

Form pairs. List the things on which you have the same opinion and also the ones on which you have different opinions. Prepare a list of ten things in all and see how far you agree or disagree with your friend. Some useful phrases are given alongside.

You could talk about:

- Clothes, latest fashion.
- Performance of sportsmen and women.
- Traffic/Transport in your area.
- Cleanliness and hygiene in your area.
- Future occupations/Careers.
- Latest news items.
- TV programmes
- Mobile Apps
- Any subject of your choice.

Agreement

- I totally agree with you.
- Exactly/Absolutely!
- You are right.
- I don't know, I need to think about it. (partial agreement)
- I suppose so.

Ask for your friend's opinion:

- Do you think ...?
- Do you agree ...?
- ◆ What do you think?
- ◆ What is your opinion?
- ◆ How do you feel about that?

Disagreement

- No, I don't think so.
- I totally disagree.
- Not necessarily.
- I'm not sure about that.
- Let's agree to disagree!

Please Listen!

When I ask you to listen to me
and you start giving me advice,
you have not done what I asked.

When I ask you to listen to me
and you begin to tell me why
I shouldn't feel that way,
you are trampling on my feelings.

When I ask you to listen to me
and you feel you have to do something to solve my problem,
you have failed me,
strange as that may seem.

Listen! All I ask is that you listen.

Don't talk or do - just hear me.

Advice is cheap; 20 cents will get you both Dear Abby and Billy Graham in the same newspaper.

And I can do for myself; I am not helpless.
Maybe discouraged and faltering,
but not helpless.

When you do something for me that I can and need to do for myself, you contribute to my fear and inadequacy.

But when you accept as a simple fact that I feel what I feel,
no matter how irrational,
then I can stop trying to convince you

- ◆ What's the difference between 'hear' and 'listen'?

Think, guess and answer :

- ◆ How old is the speaker in the poem?
- ◆ Who is he/she talking to?
- ◆ What must have happened before the speaker says all this?

'20 cents ... newspaper' – This is a reference to the columns in newspapers where people write about their problems and the columnist offers advice. See if your local papers have it.

Think, discuss and answer :

- ◆ Is the speaker aware of his shortcomings?
 - ◆ Does he/she want to improve?
 - ◆ Is he/she confident that he/she can improve?
 - ◆ How does he/she want to work it out?
 - ◆ Is the poet willing to listen to others?
Discuss how you can be a good listener.
- irrational : illogical, without any reason or base and get about this business of understanding what's behind this irrational feeling.

And when that's clear, the answers are obvious and I don't need advice.

Irrational feelings make sense when we understand what's behind them.

Perhaps that's why prayer works, sometimes, for some people – because God is mute, and he doesn't give advice or try to fix things.

God just listens and lets you work it out for yourself.

So please listen, and just hear me.

And if you want to talk, wait a minute for your turn – and I will listen to you.

The Storyteller

It was a hot afternoon, and the railway carriage was correspondingly sultry, and the next stop was at Templecombe, nearly an hour ahead. The occupants of the carriage were a small girl, and a smaller girl, and a small boy. Their aunt occupied one corner seat, and the further corner seat on the opposite side was occupied by a bachelor who was a stranger to their party, but the small girls and the small boy emphatically occupied the compartment. Both the aunt and the children were conversational in a limited, persistent way, reminding one of the attentions of a housefly that refuses to be discouraged. Most of the aunt's remarks seemed to begin with 'Don't,' and nearly all of the children's remarks began with 'Why?' The bachelor said nothing out loud.

"Don't, Cyril, don't," exclaimed the aunt, as the small boy began smacking the cushions of the seat, producing a cloud of dust at each blow.

"Come and look out of the window," she added.

The child moved reluctantly to the window. "Why are those sheep being driven out of that field?" he asked.

"I expect they are being driven to another field where there is more grass," said the aunt weakly.

"But there is lots of grass in that field," protested the boy; "there's nothing else but grass there. Aunt, there's lots of grass in that field."

"Perhaps the grass in the other field is better," suggested the aunt fatuously.

"Why is it better?" came the swift, inevitable question.

"Oh, look at those cows!" exclaimed the aunt. Nearly every field along the line had contained cows or bullocks, but she spoke as though she were drawing attention to a rarity.

- ◆ How many occupants did the compartment have?

- ◆ Why did the aunt have to use the word 'Don't' so often?

- emphatically : in a noticeable manner

- fatuously : foolishly

- inevitable : unavoidable

“Why is the grass in the other field better?” persisted Cyril.

- ◆ How did the smaller of the two girls irritate the bachelor?
 - ◆ To which question from Cyril was aunt unable to give a reasonable answer?
 - ◆ How did the children show their disapproval of their aunt’s story?
- a scowl : an angry look

- resolute : firm
- estimation : opinion
- petulant : unreasonable
- deplorably : in a very bad way

The frown on the bachelor’s face was deepening to a scowl. He was a hard, unsympathetic man, the aunt decided in her mind. She was utterly unable to come to any satisfactory decision about the grass in the other field.

The smaller girl created a diversion by beginning to recite ‘On the Road to Mandalay.’ She only knew the first line, but she put her limited knowledge to the fullest possible use. She repeated the line, over and over again, in a dreamy but resolute and very audible voice; it seemed to the bachelor as though some one had had a bet with her that she could not repeat the line aloud two thousand times without stopping. Whoever it was, who had made the wager was likely to lose his bet.

“Come over here and listen to a story,” said the aunt, when the bachelor had looked twice at her.

The children moved listlessly towards the aunt’s end of the carriage. Evidently, her reputation as a story-teller did not rank high in their estimation.

In a low, confidential voice, interrupted at frequent intervals by loud, petulant questionings from her listeners, she began an unenterprising and deplorably uninteresting story about a little girl who was good, and made friends with every one on account of her goodness, and was finally saved from a mad bull by a number of rescuers who admired her moral character.

“Wouldn’t they have saved her if she hadn’t been good?” demanded the bigger of the small girls. It was exactly the question that the bachelor had wanted to ask.

“Well, yes,” admitted the aunt lamely, “but I don’t think they would have run quite so fast to her help if they had not liked her so much.”

“It’s the stupidest story I’ve ever heard,” said the bigger of the small girls, with immense conviction.

“I didn’t listen after the first bit, it was so stupid,” said Cyril.

The smaller girl made no actual comment on the story, but she had long ago recommenced a murmured repetition of her favourite line.

"You don't seem to be a success as a story-teller," said the bachelor suddenly from his corner.

The aunt bristled in instant defence at this unexpected attack.

"It's a very difficult thing to tell stories that children can both understand and appreciate," she said stiffly.

"I don't agree with you," said the bachelor.

"Perhaps you would like to tell them a story," was the aunt's retort.

"Tell us a story," demanded the bigger of the small girls.

"Once upon a time," began the bachelor, "there was a little girl called Bertha, who was extra-ordinarily good."

The children's momentarily-aroused interest began at once to flicker; all stories seemed dreadfully alike, no matter who told them.

"She did all that she was told, she was always truthful, she kept her clothes clean, ate milk puddings as though they were jam tarts, learned her lessons perfectly, and was polite in her manners."

"Was she pretty?" asked the bigger of the small girls.

"Not as pretty as any of you," said the bachelor, "but she was horribly good."

There was a wave of reaction in favour of the story; the word horrible in connection with goodness was a novelty that commended itself. It seemed to introduce a ring of truth that was absent from the aunt's tales of infant life.

- bristled : got angry
- commended : proved acceptable

Part II

- ◆ For which three values did Bertha win medals? What was exceptional about it?

- ◆ How did the Prince reward Bertha?

- ◆ Why did the children approve of the prince's decision?

"She was so good," continued the bachelor, "that she won several medals for goodness, which she always wore, pinned on to her dress. There was a medal for obedience, another medal for punctuality, and a third for good behaviour. They were large metal medals and they clicked against one another as she walked. No other child in the town where she lived had as many as three medals, so everybody knew that she must be an extra good child."

"Horribly good," quoted Cyril.

"Everybody talked about her goodness, and the Prince of the country got to hear about it, and he said that as she was so very good she might be allowed once a week to walk in his park, which was just outside the town. It was a beautiful park, and no children were ever allowed in it, so it was a great honour for Bertha to be allowed to go there."

"Were there any sheep in the park?" demanded Cyril.

"No;" said the bachelor, "there were no sheep. But there were other small, harmless animals in the park."

The storyteller paused to let a full idea of the park's treasures sink into the children's imaginations; then he resumed:

"Bertha was rather sorry to find that there were no flowers in the park. She had promised her aunts, with tears in her eyes, that she would not pick any of the kind Prince's flowers, and she had meant to keep her promise, so of course it made her feel silly to find that there were no flowers to pick."

"Why weren't there any flowers?"

"Because the animals had eaten them all," said the bachelor promptly. "The gardeners had told the Prince that you couldn't have animals and flowers, so he decided to have animals and no flowers."

There was a murmur of approval at the excellence of the Prince's decision; so many people would have decided the other way.

"There were lots of other delightful things in the park. There were ponds with gold and blue and green fish in them, and trees with beautiful parrots that said clever things at a moment's notice, and humming birds that hummed all the popular tunes of the day.

Bertha walked up and down and enjoyed herself immensely, and thought to herself: 'If I were not so extraordinarily good I should not have been allowed to come into this beautiful park and enjoy all that there is to be seen in it,' and her three medals clinked against one another as she walked and helped to remind her how very good she really was.

Just then an enormous wolf came prowling into the park to see if it could catch a fat little animal for its supper. The first thing that it saw in the park was Bertha; her pinafore was so spotlessly white and clean that it could be seen from a great distance. Bertha saw the wolf and saw that it was stealing towards her, and she began to wish that she had never been allowed to come into the park. She ran as hard as she could, and the wolf came after her with huge leaps and bounds. She managed to reach a shrubbery of myrtle bushes and she hid herself in one of the thickest of the bushes. The wolf came sniffing among the branches, its black tongue lolling out of its mouth and its pale grey eyes glaring with rage. Bertha was terribly frightened, and thought to herself: 'If I had not been so extraordinarily good I should have been safe in the town at this moment.' However, the scent of the myrtle was so strong that the wolf could not sniff out where Bertha was hiding, and the bushes were so thick that he might have hunted about in them for a long time without catching sight of her, so he thought he might as well go off and catch a little animal instead.

Bertha was trembling very much at having the wolf prowling and sniffing so near her, and as she trembled the medal for obedience clinked against the medals for good conduct and punctuality. The wolf was just moving away, when he heard the sound of the medals clinking and stopped to listen; they clinked again in a bush quite near him. He dashed into the bush, his pale grey eyes gleaming with ferocity and triumph, and dragged Bertha out and devoured her to the last morsel. All that was left of her were her shoes, bits of clothing, and the three medals for goodness.”

“The story began badly,” said the smaller of the small girls, “but it had a beautiful ending.”

“It is the most beautiful story that I ever heard,” said the bigger of the small girls, with immense decision.

“It is the only beautiful story I have ever heard,” said Cyril.

A dissentient opinion came from the aunt.

“A most improper story to tell to young children! You have undermined the effect of years of careful teaching.”

“At any rate,” said the bachelor, collecting his belongings preparatory to leaving the carriage, “I kept them quiet for ten minutes, which was more than you were able to do.”

“Unhappy woman!” he observed to himself as he walked down the platform of Templecombe station; “for the next six months or so those children will assail her in public with demands for an improper story!”

Intellectual Rubbish

- ◆ What erroneous notion did Aristotle have? What does his example convey to you?
- ◆ How can you prevent developing a dogmatic attitude?
- ◆ What do you feel when –
 - (a) Someone opposes your strong belief.
 - (b) Someone insists that $2+2 = 5$.
- dogmatism : insisting on the truth of one's opinion without evidence

To avoid the various foolish opinions to which mankind are prone, no superhuman genius is required. A few simple rules will keep you, not from all error, but from silly error.

If the matter is one that can be settled by observation, make the observation yourself. Aristotle could have avoided the mistake of thinking that women have fewer teeth than men, by the simple device of asking Mrs Aristotle to keep her mouth open while he counted. He did not do so because he thought he knew. Thinking that you know when in fact you don't is a fatal mistake, to which we are all prone. I believe myself that hedgehogs eat black beetles, because I have been told that they do; but if I were writing a book on the habits of hedgehogs, I should not commit myself until I had seen one enjoying this unappetizing diet. Aristotle, however, was less cautious....

Many matters, however, are less easily brought to the test of experience. If, like most of mankind, you have passionate convictions on many such matters, there are ways in which you can make yourself aware of your own bias. If an opinion contrary to your own makes you angry, that is a sign that you are subconsciously aware of having no good reason for thinking as you do. If someone maintains that two and two are five, or that Iceland is on the equator, you feel pity rather than anger, unless you know so little of arithmetic or geography that his opinion shakes your own contrary conviction. The most savage controversies are those about matters as to which there is no good evidence either way... so whenever you find yourself getting angry about a difference of opinion, be on your guard; you will probably find, on examination, that your belief is going beyond what the evidence warrants.

A good way of ridding yourself of certain kinds of dogmatism is to become aware of opinions held in social circles different from your own. When I was young, I lived much outside my own country – in France, Germany, Italy and the United States. I found this very profitable in diminishing the intensity of insular prejudice. If you cannot travel, seek out people with whom you disagree, and read a newspaper belonging to a party that is not yours. If the people and the newspaper seem mad, perverse and wicked, remind yourself that you seem so to them. In this opinion both parties may be right, but they cannot both be wrong. This reflection should generate a certain caution.

Becoming aware of foreign customs, however, does not always have a beneficial effect. In the seventeenth century, when the Manchus conquered China, it was the custom among the Chinese for the woman to have small feet, and among the Manchus for the men to wear pigtails. Instead of each dropping their own foolish custom, they each adopted the foolish custom of the other, and the Chinese continued to wear pigtails until they shook off the dominion of the Manchus in the revolution of 1911.

For those who have enough psychological imagination, it is a good plan to imagine an argument with a person having a different bias. This has one advantage, and only one, as compared with actual conversation with opponents; this one advantage is that the method is not subject to the same limitations of time and space. Mahatma Gandhi deplored railways and steamboats and machinery; he would have liked to undo the whole of the industrial revolution. You may never have an opportunity of actually meeting any one who holds this opinion, because in Western countries most people take the advantage of modern technique for granted. But if you want to make sure that you are right in agreeing with the prevailing opinion, you will find it a good plan to test the arguments that occur to you by considering what Gandhi might have said in refutation of them. I have sometimes been led actually to change my mind as a result of this kind of imaginary dialogue, and, short of this, I have frequently found myself growing less dogmatic and cocksure through realising the possible reasonableness of a hypothetical opponent.

- insular : disinterested in ideas from foreign countries
- perverse : stubbornly opposed to
- refutation : that which disproves
- hypothetical : based on an assumption

- ◆ What two examples does the writer give to those who have opinions that flatter their self-esteem?

Be very wary of opinions that flatter your self-esteem. Both men and women, nine times out of ten, are firmly convinced of the superior excellence of their own sex. There is abundant evidence on both sides. If you are a man, you can point out that most poets and men of science are male; if you are a woman, you can retort that so are most criminals. The question is inherently insoluble, but self-esteem conceals this from most people.

We are all, whatever part of the world we come from, persuaded that our own nation is superior to all others. Seeing that each nation has its characteristic merits and demerits, we adjust our standard of values so as to make out that the merits possessed by our nation are the really important ones, while its demerits are comparatively trivial.

- ◆ What is the only way to tackle such self-pride?

Here, again, the rational man will admit that the question is one to which there is no demonstrably right answer. It is more difficult to deal with the self-esteem of man as man, because we cannot argue out the matter with some non-human mind. The only way I know of dealing with this general human conceit is to remind ourselves that man is a brief episode in the life of a small planet in a little corner of the universe, and that for aught we know, other parts of the cosmos may contain beings as superior to ourselves as we are to jelly-fish.

- inherently : by nature
- aught : anything
- elixir of life : a divine substance that made somebody immortal

Other passions besides self-esteem are common sources of error. Of these perhaps the most important is fear. Fear sometimes operates directly, by inventing rumours of disaster in war-time, or by imagining objects of terror, such as ghosts; sometimes it operates indirectly, by creating belief in something comforting, such as the elixir of life, or heaven for ourselves and hell for our enemies. Fear has many forms – fear of death, fear of the dark, fear of the unknown, and that vague generalised fear that comes to those who conceal from themselves their more specific terrors. Until you have admitted your own fears to yourself, and have guarded yourself by a difficult effort of will against their myth-making power, you cannot hope to think truly about many matters of great importance, especially those with which religious beliefs are concerned. Fear is the main source of superstition, and one of the main sources of cruelty. To conquer fear is the beginning of wisdom, in the pursuit of truth as in the endeavour after a worthy manner of life.

There are two ways of avoiding fear : one is by persuading ourselves that we are immune from disaster, and the other is by the practice of sheer courage. The latter is difficult, and to everybody becomes impossible at a certain point. The former has, therefore, always been more popular. Primitive magic has the purpose of securing safety, either by injuring enemies or by protecting oneself by talismans, spells, or incantations. Without any essential change, belief in such ways of avoiding danger survived throughout the many centuries of civilisation....Science has now lessened the belief in magic, but many people place more faith in mascots than they are willing to avow... Neither a man nor a crowd nor a nation can be trusted to act humanely or to think sanely under the influence of a great fear. And for this reason poltroons are more prone to cruelty than brave men, and are also more prone to superstition...

But we have been getting too solemn. Superstitions are not always dark and cruel; often they add to the gaiety of life. I received once a communication from the god Osiris, giving me his telephone number; he lived, at that time, in a suburb of Boston. Although I did not enroll myself among his worshippers, his letter gave me pleasure. I have frequently received letters from men announcing themselves as the Messiah, and urging me not to omit to mention this important fact in my lectures.

I admire especially a certain prophetess who lived beside a lake in Northern New York State about the year 1820. She announced to her numerous followers that she possessed the power of walking on water, and that she proposed to do so at 11 o'clock on a certain morning. At the stated time, the faithful assembled in their thousands beside the lake. She spoke to them saying : 'Are you all entirely persuaded that I can walk

- ◆ What two evils does fear lead to? How can one overcome fear?

- ◆ What is the aim of primitive magic?

- talisman : a small object used to fetch good luck.
- incantation : magical words recited in the same tone
- poltroons : cowards

on water?' with one voice they replied : 'We are'. 'In that case', she announced, 'there is no need for me to do so.' And they all went home much edified.

Perhaps the world would lose some of its interest and variety if such beliefs were wholly replaced by cold science...

A wise man will enjoy the goods of which there is a plentiful supply, and of intellectual rubbish he will find an abundant diet, in our own age as in every other.

- Bertrand Russell

My Financial Career

WHEN I go into a bank I get rattled. The clerks rattle me; the wickets rattle me; the sight of the money rattles me; everything rattles me.

The moment I cross the threshold of a bank I am a hesitating jay. If I attempt to transact business there I become an irresponsible idiot.

I knew this beforehand, but my salary had been raised to fifty dollars a month, and I felt that the bank was the only place for it.

So I shambled in and looked timidly around at the clerks. I had an idea that a person about to open an account must needs consult the manager.

I went up to a wicket marked ‘Accountant.’ The accountant was a tall, cool devil. The very sight of him rattled me. My voice was sepulchral.

“Can I see the manager?” I said, and added solemnly, “alone.” I don’t know why I said ‘alone.’

“Certainly,” said the accountant, and fetched him.

The manager was a grave, calm man. I held my fifty-six dollars clutched in a crumpled ball in my pocket.

“Are you the manager?” I said. God knows I didn’t doubt it.

“Yes,” he said.

“Can I see you?” I asked, “Alone?” I didn’t want to say ‘alone’ again, but without it the thing seemed self-evident.

The manager looked at me in some alarm. He felt that I had an awful secret to reveal.

“Come in here,” he said, and led the way to a private room. He turned the key.

“We are safe from interruption here,” he said; “sit down.”

We both sat down and looked at one another. I found no voice to speak.

“You are one of Pinkerton’s men, I presume,” he said.

- jay : a person who talks foolishly
- sepulchral : gloomy, sorrowful

- ◆ What error did the author make in the cheque? Did he correct it?

He had gathered from my mysterious manner that I was a detective. I knew what he was thinking and it made me worse.

"No, not from Pinkerton's," I said, seemingly to imply that I came from a rival agency. "To tell the truth," I went on, as if I had been prompted to lie about it, "I am not a detective at all. I have come to open an account. I intend to keep all my money in this bank."

The manager looked relieved, but still serious; he concluded now that I was a son of Baron Rothschild, or a young Gould.

"A large account, I suppose," he said.

"Fairly large," I whispered. "I propose to deposit fifty-six dollars now, and fifty dollars a month regularly."

The manager got up and opened the door. He called to the accountant.

"Mr. Montgomery," he said, unkindly loud, "this gentleman is opening an account; he will deposit fifty-six dollars. Good morning."

I rose.

A big iron door stood open at the side of the room.

"Good morning," I said, and stepped into the safe.

"Come out," said the manager coldly, and showed me the other way.

I went up to the accountant's wicket and poked the ball of money at him with a quick, convulsive movement, as if I were doing a conjuring trick.

My face was ghastly pale.

"Here," I said, "deposit it." The tone of the words seemed to mean, "Let us do this painful thing while the fit is on us."

He took the money and gave it to another clerk. He made me write the sum on a slip and sign my name in a book. I no longer knew what I was doing. The bank swam before my eyes.

"Is it deposited?" I asked in a hollow vibrating voice.

"It is," said the accountant.

"Then I want to draw a check."

- Baron Rothschild : The wealthiest most influential man of the time
- Gould : one of the richest men of that time

My idea was to draw out six dollars of it for present use. Some one gave me a check-book through a wicket, and some one else began telling me how to write it out. The people in the bank had the impression that I was an invalid millionaire. I wrote something on the check and thrust it in at the clerk. He looked at it.

"What! Are you drawing it all out again?" he asked in surprise. Then I realised that I had written fifty-six instead of six. I was too far gone to reason now. I had a feeling that it was impossible to explain the thing. All the clerks had stopped writing to look at me.

Reckless with misery, I made a plunge.

"Yes, the whole thing."

"You withdraw your money from the bank?"

"Every cent of it."

"Are you not going to deposit any more?" said the clerk, astonished.

"Never."

An idiot hope struck me that they might think something had insulted me while I was writing the check and that I had changed my mind. I made a wretched attempt to look like a man with a fearfully quick temper.

The clerk prepared to pay the money.

"How will you have it?" he said.

"What?"

"How will you have it?"

"Oh!" I caught his meaning, and answered, without even trying to think, "In fifties."

He gave me a fifty-dollar bill.

"And the six?" he asked dryly.

"In sixes," I said.

He gave it me, and I rushed out.

As the big doors swung behind me I caught the echo of a roar of laughter that went up to the ceiling of the bank. Since then I bank no more. I keep my money in cash in my trousers pocket, and my savings in silver dollars in a sock.

- ◆ What happened to Tansen when he sang the Deepak Raga with great vigour?
- ◆ How did he come back to normal, again?
- ◆ What did Tansen tell about his Teacher to Akbar?
- ◆ Why did Akbar change his kingly attire?

Tansen, the singer, in great Akbar's Court
Won great renown; through the Badshahi Fort

His voice rang like the sound of silver bells
And Akbar ravished heard. The story tells

How the King praised him, gave him many a gem,
Called him chief jewel in his diadem.

One day the singer sang the Song of Fire,
The Deepak Rāg , and burning like a pyre

His body burst into consuming flame.
To cure his burning heart a maiden came

And sang Malhar, the song of water cold,
Till health returned, and comfort as of old.

— Mighty thy Teacher must be and divine, —
Great Akbar said; — magic indeed is thine,

Learnt at his feet. — Then happy Tansen bowed
And said, — Beyond the world's ignoble crowd,

- ignoble : not worthy
- celestial : heavenly

Scorning its wealth, remote and far-away
He dwells within a cave of Himalay. —

— Could I but see him once, — desired the King,
— Sit at his feet awhile, and listening

Hear his celestial song, I would deny
My state and walk in robes of poverty. —

Then said Tansen. — As you desire, Huzoor,
Indeed 'twere better as a slave and poor

To come; for he, lifted above the things
Of earth, disdains to sing to earthly kings. —

Long was the road, and Akbar as a slave
Followed Tansen who rode towards the cave

High in the mountains. At the singer's feet
They knelt and prayed with supplication sweet:

— Towards thy shrine, lo, we have journeyed long,
O Holy Master, bless us with thy song! —

Then Ostad, won by their humility,
Sang songs of peace and high felicity;

The Malkous Raga all ecstatic rang
Till birds and beasts, enchanted as he sang,

Gathered to hear, o'er Akbar's dreaming soul
He felt the waves of heavenly rapture roll,

But, as he turned to speak his words of praise,
Ostad had vanished from his wondering gaze.

— Tell me, Tansen, what theme this is that holds
The soul enchanted, and the heart enfolds

In high delight — ; and, when he knew the name,
— Tell me, — again he said, — could you the same

Theme sing to lure my heart to paths untrod? —
— Ah no, to thee I sing; he sings to God. —

- Hazrat Inayat Khan

◆ What was the magical effect of Ostad's rendering the Malkous Raga?

◆ What happened before Akbar could come out of his trance?

◆ Why did Tansen's singing not produce the same effect as that by Ostad?

- supplication : humble request
- felicity : great happiness;
also, pleasing style
- theme : here it means a musical composition.

Language Study

The Language Study pages aim only at acquainting the students with some terms that are useful when we talk about language and how it works. The entries given here should not be treated as teaching items. The information given here should not be used for the purpose of evaluating the students' knowledge of grammatical definitions.

These pages are not meant to be read at a stretch. When opportunities of discussing language arise in the course of classroom teaching, the teacher can refer to the relevant entry or entries and also get the students to read them. The information should then be discussed with the help of examples drawn from the textbook or other familiar sources.

abbreviation : a short form of a word, phrase, etc. Examples : Mr (Mister), km (kilometre/s), V.I.P. (very important person), S.S.C. (Secondary School Certificate), etc. (et cetera - meaning 'and other similar things', 'and the rest'), WHO (World Health Organisation).

Abbreviations are mostly used in writing. While reading aloud or in speech, we use the full forms of abbreviations like 'Mr' (Mister) or 'Dr' (Doctor). Some abbreviations are read aloud by pronouncing each individual letter, as for example, V-I-P. Some short forms are read as if they form a word. For example, PIN is read like the word, 'pin'.

- Note the abbreviations you come across and find their full forms.

act : one of the main parts into which a play is divided. A play may have two, three, even five acts or just one act.

active voice : See voice.

adjective : a word that tells us something more about a noun or pronoun. It may

Students, too, can refer to this section from time to time. They may find this information useful while –

- (a) correcting their work
- (b) trying to understand a text, and
- (c) using dictionaries and other reference books
- (d) trying to write literary and non-literary compositions on their own.

If necessary, the teacher should show the students how to look up a word in these pages.

Some words in these pages are printed in colour. It means that they have been explained in these pages at the proper place.

tell us about the shape, size, colour, quality, material, origin, use, or other features of the noun it describes:

- shape : a round table, a square sheet
- size : The buildings were huge; small shoes
- colour : a red rose; Milk is white.
- quality : You are very kind; a strong medicine
- material : wooden chairs, a silver spoon
- origin : Chinese food, Indian birds

Many adjectives end with : –ful (useful), –less (careless), –able (washable), –y (salty), –ous (famous, joyous), –ive (active, creative), –al (practical, optical).

We can use 'very' before most of the adjectives : 'very happy', 'very colourful', 'very interesting'.

Adjectives have comparative and superlative forms.

Example : big – bigger (comparative), – biggest (superlative).

We usually add ‘-er’, ‘-est’ to short adjectives and use ‘more’ and ‘most’ with longer adjectives :

high – higher – highest nice – nicer – nicest famous – more famous – most famous interesting – more interesting – most interesting

Note that we use ‘the’ before the superlative : the best, the most important.

Sometimes, we use two or three adjectives together to describe a noun. In such cases, the order in which adjectives are used depends on the meaning. The adjectives that express/show your opinion about something are usually put first. The other adjectives are normally put in the following order :

- size, age, shape, colour, origin, material, use or purpose

Examples : a nice little basket, a brave young woman, a big, red, plastic bag, a noisy, old, drilling machine.

- Find phrases where more than two adjectives are used, and note the order in which they are used.

adjective clause : a clause that functions as an adjective and tells us more about a noun. Example: • This is the house that Jack built.

adverb : a word that tells us something more about :

- a verb: He runs fast. She went away. The girl sang sweetly. Suddenly, the dogs started barking. She did not smile.
- an adjective : The tea was too sweet. The lion was very strong.
- another adverb : He ran very fast.
- a phrase or sentence : Luckily, he remembered the answer.

Adverbs give us information about:

- place, eg., Come here. Come in.
- time, eg., I saw a movie yesterday. I need a pen now.
- manner or the way something is done, eg., Read aloud. Stand straight. Run fast.
- degree, eg., The water was too hot.
- cause or reason, eg., She was tired and therefore unable to study.

Many adverbs end with -ly. Adverbs, too, have comparative and superlative forms. They are used for comparing the way something is done, the way something happens, etc.

Examples : Who will run the fastest? Walk more gracefully.

- Find more examples of the comparative and superlative forms of adverbs.

adverb clause : a clause that functions as an adverb and tells us more about the main verb (action). Examples: • You can go out to play after you have done your homework. • They got wet because they didn't carry an umbrella.

alliteration : the occurrence of the same letter or sound at the beginning of words in a phrase, sentence, etc. Example : The green grass grew all around.

alphabet : a set of letters used for writing the words in a language. The letters have a fixed order in the alphabet. The set of letters we use for writing English is arranged from a to z. It is known as the Roman alphabet.

A, B, C, d, e, f, g, etc. are called letters, not alphabets.

antithesis : a figure of speech in which the same sentence includes a striking contrast between words. Example: One man's medicine is another man's poison.

antonym : a word that means the opposite of another word. Strong is an antonym of weak. Up and down are antonyms.

apostrophe : See punctuation.

article : The words ‘a/an’ and ‘the’ are called articles. They are used before a noun.

‘The’ is known as the definite article. It shows that the noun refers to a particular example of something, eg., I am looking for the blue pen. (And not the red one.)

‘A/an’ is called the indefinite article. It shows that the noun refers to a general example of something, eg., I want a pen. (Any pen.)

a + consonant
a pen

an + vowel
an apple

Before nouns beginning with a consonant sound, we use 'a'; and before nouns beginning with a vowel sound, we use 'an'.

We do this both when we speak and when we write. Examples : a lion, a squirrel, but an ant, an elephant.

If there is an adjective before the noun and after the article, the use of a/an depends on that adjective.

Examples: I ate an egg but I ate a boiled egg.

a story, but an unending story.

The definite article is always written as 'the'. But when we speak, we pronounce it as 'द' before consonant sounds and 'दि' before vowel sounds, eg., 'र' lion but 'दि' elephant.

aspect : a form of a verb that shows whether an action is complete or is still continuing. Or, it may show that it happened or was happening in the past but is still relevant. The two aspects are perfect (perfective) and progressive or continuous.

Verb forms show both tense (present, past, future) and aspect (perfect, progressive).

• progressive : be + v-ing present progressive : They are going.

past progressive : They were going.

• perfect : have + v-ed/-en present perfect : They have gone.

Sometimes all these forms are referred to as only tenses.

something is possible, necessary, etc. There are two sets of auxiliary verbs.

They have gone:

Did he go?

She did not go.

(b) modal auxiliaries : auxiliaries like can, should, may, must : It can fly; They should come back; May I come in? She might come; A student must work hard.

Example : In the sentence 'I went home because it was getting dark' ; there are two clauses : I went home, and because it was getting dark.

In the above sentence, if you read only 'I went home', it sounds complete. So, it is the main clause.

There are two types of clauses : main and subordinate :

(a) main clause : A main clause can stand by itself as a complete sentence. Even if you read just the main clause, it makes good sense.

(b) subordinate or dependent clause : It cannot stand by itself as a complete sentence. If you read just the subordinate clause, it does not make good sense. In the above sentence, 'because it was getting dark' is the subordinate clause. If you read only this clause, you realise that it is incomplete and the sentence includes something else.

Subordinate clauses are further classified into adjective clauses, adverb clauses and noun clauses according to whether they act as adjectives, adverbs or nouns, respectively.

comedy : • a play or film with a happy ending
• entertainment such as a film, play, TV programme, etc. that make you laugh.

An object complement comes after the object of a verb and gives us information about the object.

Examples : They made her secretary.

The consonant letters we use for writing English are :

English nouns are not grouped according to gender and normally they do not have special endings to show gender. Some exceptions are : actor-actress, prince-princess.

(Compare this with the nouns in your mother tongue.)

Note that the personal pronouns 'he', 'she' and 'it' show masculine, feminine and neuter gender respectively.

- We can form questions and negative sentences using modals without using the auxiliaries be, have or do.

Examples : Can you swim? May I drink water? Must he complain? He cannot jump high. You must not cry. One may not like it.

A modal auxiliary is always followed by an infinitive.

On the other hand, some of the different letters stand for one and the same sound. The ‘a’ in all, the ‘aw’ in dawn, the ‘o’ in born, all stand for the same sound. The sound ‘f’ is shown by different letters in –fish, cough, graph and puff.

Punctuation

In writing, we show words and sentences separately. We also show whether a sentence is a question or an exclamation or a statement. We show what each person has said in the course of conversation. We show these and many other things with the help of certain marks. Punctuation is a system of using these marks in writing. We use them to separate or specify certain items.

apostrophe : ['] , The apostrophe is a punctuation mark. It is used with 's' (or by itself) to show that a thing or a person belongs to somebody.

Examples : • Raju's toys

- My brother's bat
- Her friend's father
- the cow's tail
- the princess's ring
- a week's holiday

– Note that ['] is used mainly with the names of living things and also in some phrases denoting time. Normally, it is not used with non-living things. We say –

• 'the leg of the table' and not 'the table's leg'.

• 'the surface of the wall' and not 'the wall's surface'.

With the pronoun 'it', we use only [s] and not [']s .

Examples : its horns, its cover.

– With a plural noun ending with 's', we use only the apostrophe and not [']s .

Examples : Boys' School, rabbits' ears.

– We can use either only ['] or [']s with names ending in 's'.

Examples : Suhas's bag or Suhas' bag.

- The apostrophe is also used to show that a letter / letters have been omitted.

- In titles of books, films, stories, etc. : Balbharati, Sleeping Beauty, The Last Leaf.

- In some abbreviations : B.A., Smt., PTO

The pronoun 'I' and the exclamation 'O' are always in capital.

comma : [,] Commas show a slight pause. They are used – subject and one predicate. It has only one finite verb. Example: • Margie was hurt. Compound and complex sentences have two or more clauses.

A sentence made of two or more main or independent clauses is compound sentence. Example: • Open your books and start reading the poem. • I called him, but he did not stop.

A complex sentence consists of one main or independent clause and one or more subordinate (dependent) clauses.

These subordinate or dependent clauses cannot make independent sentences.

— what people or things do and what happens to them (write, fall, float).

— A verb may also describe a happening : It rained ; It became dark, or — a state : She was unhappy.

Verbs have different forms that show tenses, the time of the action to which the verb refers. (future, past and present.)

Verbs have singular and plural forms only in the case of the present tense : comes (singular), come (plural).

- Note that we do not use singular forms with 'I' and 'you': I come, You smile; and NOT I comes, You smiles.

The verbs be (am/are, is/are, was/were, being, been), have (has, have, having, had) and do (does, do, doing, did, done) can be used as main verbs in a sentence.

Examples :

- be: I am twelve years old. They were ready.
- have : I have a brother. The dinosaur had a long tail.
- do : Do your best. She did some work.

These verbs are also used with the main verbs in a sentence to show certain things. Then, they are called auxiliary or helping verbs.

- 'Be + main verb' shows that the action is not complete; it goes on, eg., I am running./It is raining. They were playing. (The present and the past progressive respectively.)

- 'Have + main verb' shows that the action about which we are talking now, is/was complete, eg., I have done my homework. She had read the book. (The present and the past perfect respectively.)

- 'Do' is used with the main verb –

- (a) to form questions: Do you know the answer?

Did you see the bird?

What do you want?

What did the queen tell them?

- (b) to form negative sentences : We did not go back.

'Be' and 'have' auxiliaries can also form questions and negatives. 'Do' is not needed when these are used.

Examples :

- (a) Questions : Are you writing a story?

Have you written this?

Why have you come back?

- (b) Negatives : I was not feeling well.

She had not seen the book.

There are other verbs like can, could, may, might, will, would, shall, should, must, ought to, used to, etc. which show whether something is possible, allowed, necessary, etc. These are known as modal verbs or modal auxiliaries. They, too, are used as auxiliaries with the main verbs.

Examples : I can swim.

You may come in. You should not work too hard. Must you go? See tense, aspect, auxiliary.

- verse : • poems in general, or

- a group of lines forming a unit in a poem or song, eg., a song with four verses.

voice : the form of a verb that shows whether the subject of a sentence does an action (active voice) or has an action done to it (passive voice).

Examples: The policeman stopped the traffic. (active voice)

The traffic was stopped by the policeman. (passive voice)

Note that the object in the active sentence becomes the subject of the passive sentence and the verb form includes a form of ‘be’ + past participle.

We normally use the passive voice to emphasise what happened, happens, etc. rather than ‘who’ or ‘what’ does the action. In the passive sentence, the ‘doer’ of the action may or may not be mentioned. We use ‘by’ before it, when it is mentioned :

The nuts were cracked.

The nuts were cracked by a squirrel.

The nuts were cracked by a squirrel with its teeth.

vowel : a speech sound you make without closing any part of your mouth or throat. For example, ‘अौ’, ‘आ’. A vowel letter is a letter of the alphabet that stands for a vowel sound.

The vowel letters are : a, e, i, o, u. The letter ‘y’ too, sometimes stands for a vowel.

Note that one letter may stand for different sounds in different words. For example, the same vowel letter ‘a’ stands for different vowel sounds in the words : all, ate, ant, arm, etc.

word : a group of sounds/letters that has meaning. A word is a unit of language. A word is written by leaving spaces on both the sides.

Many times, new words are formed using different processes. They are affixation – adding a prefix or suffix to another word. (b) conversion – changing the class of a word without adding a prefix or suffix. Example: ‘run’ (verb) and ‘run’ (noun). (c) compounding – joining two or more words to produce a word with a new meaning. Example: tea + pot = teapot.

There are also certain other processes of word formation such as –

(a) forming reduplicatives by joining two similar sounding elements.

Example: tick-tock

(b) clipping a word.

Example: photography - photo, telephone - phone

(c) forming acronyms or new words from the initial letters of words.

Example: TV (television), ISRO (Indian Space Research Organisation.)
